Troop 42's Andrew LeLacheur Earns Eagle Scout Award

Spruces Up Milton Cemetery

By SCOTT JACKSON

For his Eagle Scout project, one member of Quincy-based Troop 42 led the effort to spruce up Milton Cemetery, an undertaking that included the addition of new signage, the installation of boxes where screech owls can nest, and the cleaning of historic headstones.

Andrew LeLacheur received his Eagle Scout award during an Aug. 14 ceremony at East Congregational Church in Milton. LeLacheur said receiving the award meant a lot to him.

"It means a lot to me. I've been working on this for a while. I'm 19, which is obviously a little older than usual - I had to get an extension because of some medical problems," he said in a recent interview.

"Just in general I think it means that you really put a lot of time and effort into helping your troop and getting an Eagle Scout involves a lot of long-term planning, so it means you can follow through on that."

A Milton resident, LeLacheur completed his project in December 2021 after several months of planning.

"I'm from Milton so I went up to the cemetery and asked them if they needed help doing something for the cemetery," he said. "They gave me a list of different projects they needed done and I picked a couple."

ANDREW LeLACHEUR, a member of Troop 42 in Quincy, recently received his Eagle Scout award. For his Eagle Scout project, LeLacheur oversaw various improvements within Milton Cemetery.

SIX BOXES for screech owl nests were installed within Milton Cemetery as part of the Eagle Scout project. Each box was hung between 15 and 30 feet in the air. Here, Scoutmaster Kevin Gillespie hangs one of those boxes in December.

Developer Withdraws Proposed Condo On Sea Street

By SCOTT JACKSON

With the city's zoning board poised to reject it, the developer seeking to construct a three-story, 18-unit condominium building on Sea Street withdrew the proposal following a contentious public hearing.

JVC Sea Street LLC had been seeking permission to build the new residential building at 105 Sea St., a 27,597-square-foot parcel in a Residence B zoning district that was formerly home to Imperial Terrace. The managers of the LLC are James Timmins, Quincy's city solicitor, and his son, Christopher.

An overflow crowd was on hand for the Aug. 23 hearing of the Zoning Board of Appeals in the meeting room on the first floor of the McIntyre Government Center. Twenty people spoke against the project that evening, and all three of Quincy's at-large city councillors expressed opposition to the proposal. A dozen letters in opposition to the development were also read into the record; additional letters that did not include the author's address were not incorporated into the record.

The proposal for 105 Sea St. first went before the Zoning Board of Appeals last fall and included 24 condominium units at that time. At the Aug. 23rd hearing, Christopher Carroll, the applicant's attorney, said the number of units been reduced to 18. Four of those units would have one bedroom, eleven would have two bedrooms, and three would have three bedrooms, for a total of 35 bedrooms.

Other changes to the proposal included increasing the front setback to 25 feet, reducing the height of the building by one story, and removing the roof deck and replacing it with a deck on the rear portion of the third floor of the building, project architect Tim Johnson said.

A total of 46 parking spaces would be provided on site. Thirty-five spaces, including five compact spaces, would be located within a garage on the lower level of the building. There would be an additional eleven outdoor spaces, including five for visitors.

Access for the parking garage would be provided by a driveway along the right-hand side of the property; that driveway would also lead to a smaller circular driveway for pick-up and drop-off in the front of the building. Johnson said drivers leaving the circular driveway would only be allowed to take a right-hand turn onto Sea Street at all times, while those exiting the main driveway would be limited to making a right-hand turn during certain hours on weekdays.

The residents who spoke against proposal said it was too large for the site and said the developer should instead build the six or seven units allowed by right. They also expressed concerns that the building would add to traffic in the area, that visitors to the building would park on neighborhood streets, and that the project could set a precedent for future development in the corridor, in particular at 211 Sea St.,

the former home of Grumpy White's.

"I think the profits that could be made on six or seven units is more than enough for the investment they made to buy the land," said Christopher Fox of Samoset Avenue. "Having all of us live with that mistake after the fact and then selling these units to people liv-

Access the equity in your home or free up cash monthly Here's how...

Maybe you'd love to access the equity in your home but you're nervous about taking out an adjustable home equity line with interest rates rising. Or maybe you went with a shorter term and that monthly payment has become a burden. This is something that could work for you - refinance into a new 30-year mortgage. With 30-year rates still historically low, it's definitely a home equity loan/line alternative. And also a way to free up cash monthly and make your life easier. Would a new 30-year loan be right for you? It's easy to find out. Apply online or call Angela Blanchard at 617-376-3500. Colonial Federal, a bank with ideas.

Sunflowers were revered among native Americans and used as medicine and food sources. They are still very popular today. Basic guidelines for Sunflowers growing them include using rich, well-drained, alkaline-to-neutral soil in a location that receives 5-8 hours of sunlight. Watering must be consistent, and give the soil around it nitrogen-rich fertilizer every 2 weeks. The tallest sunflower on record was grown in 2014 in Germany, reaching 30 feet!

Welcome Back To School Message From QPS Supt. Kevin Mulvey

Dear Parents and Guardians of Quincy Public Schools Students:

Welcome back for the start of the 2022-2023 school year! At all school sites and here at the Coddington Building, Quincy Public Schools staff members are busy with preparations for the new school year. Principals and their office staff members are ready to assist with registration, transfers, and any other concerns. Our eleven elementary schools are ready to welcome the QPS Class of 2035 with over 700 new Kindergarten students.

The dedicated professional staff of the Quincy Public Schools is looking forward to a year filled with a variety of learning experiences and accomplishments for your students. Students from all grade levels participated in Summer Extended Educational programs that provided academic and enrichment opportunities and employment through the Quincy Summer Youth-Works Program.

During the development of this year's budget, Mayor Koch and the School Committee collaborated with the Superintendent's Leadership and Principal Teams to prioritize maintaining class sizes within the range of School Committee guidelines through the creation of additional academic classroom and support positions. New professional staff members will participate in a two-day orientation on August 31 and September 1,

KEVIN MULVEY
Superintendent
Quincy Public Schools

including meeting with the Mayor, School Committee, and members of the Superintendent's Leadership and Principal Teams to learn about their professional responsibilities, the many programs and services offered by Quincy Public Schools, and the mentoring program for new staff.

To assist with continuing needs for upgraded educational technology, installations of new desktops and laptops and educational software are ongoing throughout the school system. Our partners in the Quincy School-Community Partnership continue to enhance our students' educational opportunities through supporting the robotics program for Grades 5-12, providing backpacks and school supplies for students and staff, real-work experiences for high school Career Vocational Technical Education students, and funding the mentoring program for new professional staff. At all levels, extended day opportunities will be available "beyond the bell" for academic enrichment, the arts, and athletics.

Our school buildings will be ready for the new school year, with the Public Buildings Maintenance staff completing improvements such as installing new floors, carpeting, and ceiling tiles; repainting classrooms; and repairs to building mechanicals. Custodians across the school system have worked diligently all summer to prepare classrooms and offices for the new school year. As always, we are grateful for the support of the Park Department in maintaining and improving the landscaping at our school buildings.

As the new school year begins, please remember that the most meaningful factor in assisting students to have a successful school experience is the participation of their parents and guardians. In order to help your children attain their goals, we need your involvement, whether it be through attending parent-teacher conferences and Parent Academy events, volunteering in your child's school, and most importantly, reinforcing the importance of on-time school attendance, appropriate behavior and class participation, and completion of schoolwork. You can also stay informed about your child's school and all of Quincy Public Schools through our website quincypublicschools.com or by following us on Facebook or Twitter (@QuincyPS). Updates on school programs and initiatives will be presented at upcoming School Committee meetings, the first of which will be held on Wednesday, September 14 at 6:30 pm in the Coddington Building and broadcast on QATV Channel 22 and livestreamed on qatv.org.

While you enjoy the last few days of summer vacation, please note the calendar for the opening days of school below. Your principal will be happy to answer any questions you might have related to the opening of school or feel free to contact my office at 617-984-8701.

- The first day of school for Grades 1-9 is Wednesday, September 7.

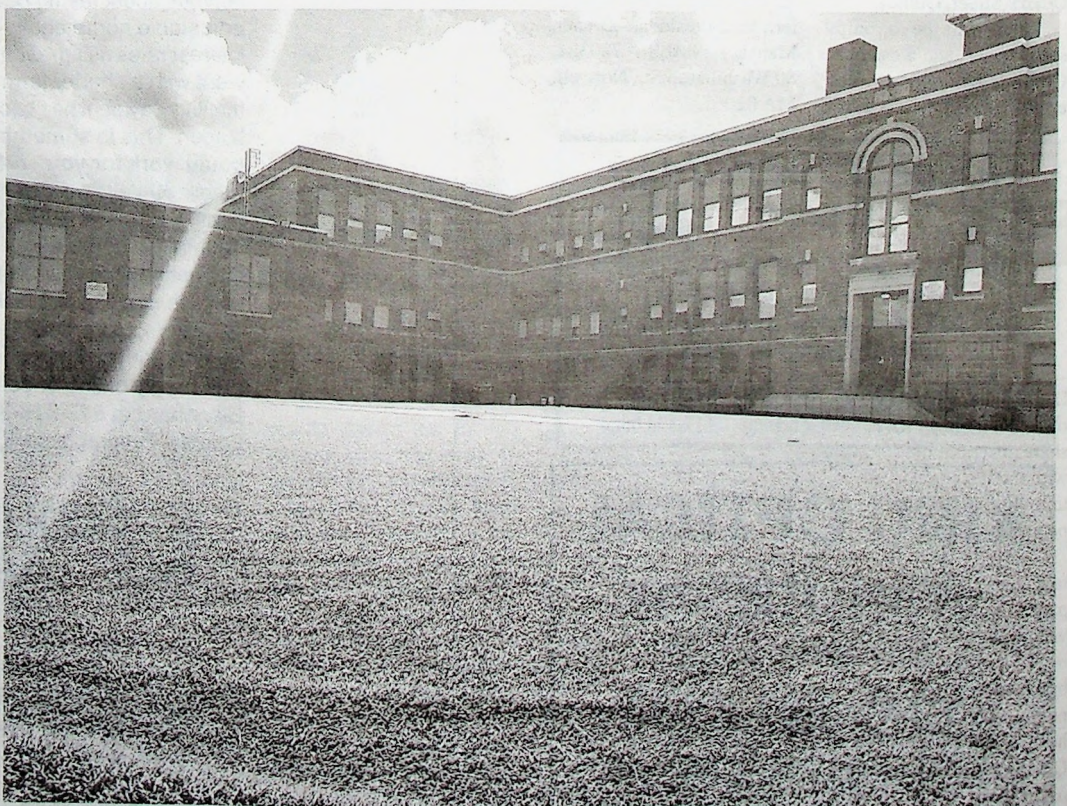

- Grades 10-12 will begin school on Thursday, September 8.

- Pre-Kindergarten and Kindergarten students will attend an Orientation at their individual schools on Friday, September 9; each family will receive information on orientation from their child's school.

- The first day of school for Kindergarten and Pre-Kindergarten is Monday, September 12.

On behalf of all of the staff at the Quincy Public Schools, best wishes for a successful school year to you and your family.

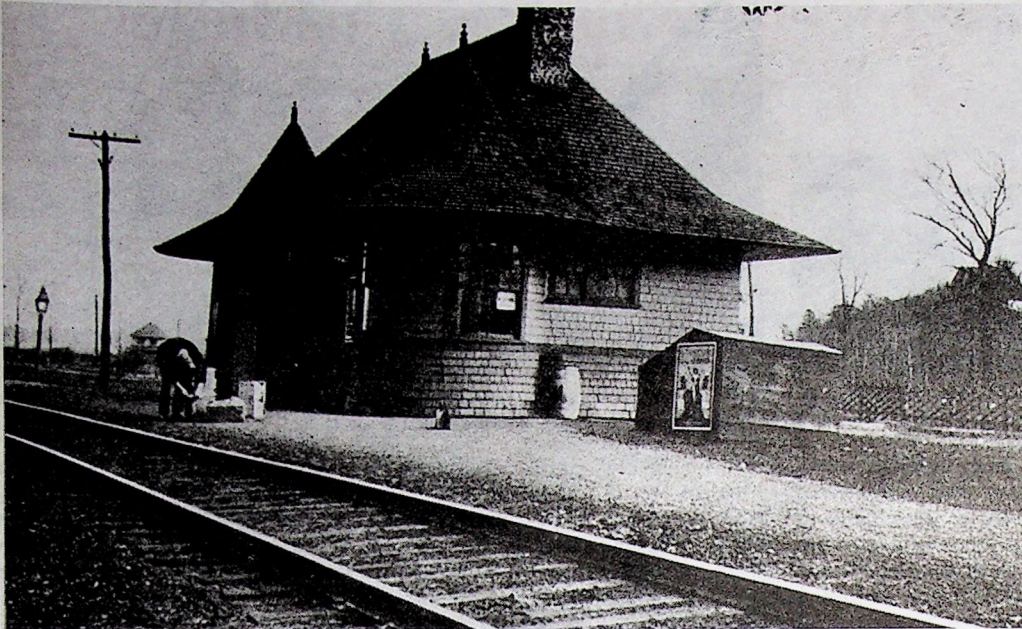

Sincerely,
Kevin W. Mulvey, J.D.
Superintendent of Schools

PUBLIC SCHOOL buildings will be ready for the new school year, with the Public Buildings Maintenance staff completing improvements such as installing new floors, carpeting, and ceiling tiles; repainting classrooms; and repairs to building mechanicals, said Quincy School Supt. Kevin Mulvey. The city is also constructing a new play area on the grounds of the Point Webster Middle School (shown above), replacing the concrete that was there with a new synthetic turf. The field should be ready by the time school opens, or soon afterwards, Mulvey said.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1917 POSTCARD is a view of the then new Montclair Depot on the Granite branch of the Old Colony Railroad. Constructed in 1870, the Granite branch tracks left the mainline just south of the Atlantic Depot and crossed the Montclair marshes joining the right of way of the old Granite Railway line in East Milton. A wooden trestle spanned the Sagamore Creek that crosses through the marsh. Because of its remoteness the trestle became a popular jumping off spot for skinny dippers where the tide was high. The tracks continued on from Milton through West and South Quincy and rejoined the mainline at Capen's Bridge near today's Archbishop Williams High School in Braintree. The passenger service, with two other depots in East Milton and West Quincy, were discontinued after 70 years in 1941. Over those years and even later countless tons of Quincy granite was shipped from the freight yards at the West Quincy station. Today, the Southeast Expressway follows the track's route through Milton, West Quincy and South Quincy. The depot above was located near the end of Harriet Avenue in Montclair, just beyond the green of the tenth hole of today's Presidents Golf Course. It was built to serve the commuters of Hillside Park, a new residential subdivision laid out on the old Pope Farm north of West Squantum Street.

Boston's Problems Should Not Burden Quincy Residents

In response to Jim Ryan's caustic letter regarding the Long Island Bridge, I am a resident of Squantum and share my community's pride with the Welcome to Squantum sign and beauty of the peninsula.

We work hard to maintain our community. The park you and your daughter visit was built with money raised by residents and the bricks to enter the park were purchased by residents. I have many friends in West Quincy who feel the same pride that I and my neighbors do. They love their community and have never complained. Perhaps you should consider moving to a new neighborhood if you are so unhappy in West Quincy, what most, particularly West-Quincians, feel is a beautiful community.

If you wish to stay and have a park like that in West Quincy, I am sure you and your neighbors can find clever ways to fund-raise to erect a nice park and a Welcome to West Quincy sign. Call your city councillor regarding sidewalks on Copeland (Street). That's what people all around the city do when there is a problem.

You really should do some homework before you share a letter that is ultimately written out of jealousy and judgment of the residents of Squantum. We have one road in and one road out of Squantum. When the old, unsafe bridge was still up and the shelter and detox were open, the traffic was terrible, ambulances sped with their lights on traveling the windy roads before the bridge - usually doing so just to transport patients there, so the lights and speeding were not necessary.

The increased traffic and safety issues were a problem and remain a concern for residents. In addition, the congestion of the expressway should be a concern to all - it's already a traffic nightmare. You stated that you fight commuter traffic to get home every day. Seems you want to make it much worse for yourself and others, particularly the residents of Squantum.

It's baffling that so many people express fear for the environment, but want to ignore the environmental issues when experts have indicated the numerous environmental concerns for a new bridge. Clearly, though, the environment is not one of any concern for you.

The Long Island Bridge was built in the 1950s. Prior to that, access to Long Island was by boat and ferry. It worked. It makes ZERO sense to transport homeless and drug addicted from Boston to Quincy. It makes ZERO sense to transport

30% Voter Turnout Predicted

More than twice as many Quincy voters are expected to stay home than go to the polls in next Tuesday's Democratic and Republican state primaries.

City Clerk John M. Gillis predicted that no more than 30% of the city's 47,062 voters would cast ballots.

"And we'll be lucky if we get 30 percent," he added. "There are no real big battles to bring the voters out. The interest just doesn't seem to be there." (Editor's note: 22,630 or 48.4% of Quincy's eligible voters cast ballots.)

One Quincy name on the ballot, former Lt. Governor Francis X. Bellotti, was attempting to make a political comeback as a Democratic candidate for state attorney general.

Perhaps the best race of all was for the state representative seat being vacated by Rep. Clifford H. Marshall who was running for Norfolk County sheriff. Candidates included Robert Cerasoli, Patrick Faherty, James Papile and Thomas Williams.

SCHOOL ENROLLMENT DIPS TO 16,000

Fifty-four new teachers joined the Quincy Public School staff of over 1,000 greeting approximately 16,000 elementary, junior high and high school students during opening day of the 1974-1975 school year.

Although enrollment falls short of last year's official registration of 16,203 students, School Superintendent Dr. Lawrence P. Creedon said, "The downward trend is not a significant one." (Editor's note: The school population would continue to decrease, bottoming out at approximately 7,900 in 1989-1990.)

BROWNWELL SEEKS AG'S ACTION AGAINST QUINCY BAY SEWAGE

Rep. Thomas Brownwell has requested the Attorney General's office to issue an official complaint against MDC pumping facilities in the Quincy area.

Brownwell noted that over the Labor Day weekend, "large quantities of sewage discharges" appeared on Quincy Bay beaches including Wollaston, Merrymount and Weymouth beaches. Although Brownwell found no evidence of raw sewage, he did say, "the rancid odor was very bad." He also noted a red tinge, like the red tide color in place along Wollaston Beach.

This data is used to find solutions for keeping trash out of the ocean.

Maureen Mazrimas, president of Friends of Wollaston Beach noted that: "Participation in this cleanup has never been more important. Not only does the cleanup preserve and protect the beach's fragile ecosystems, but the data collected in COASTSWEEP is invaluable in identifying the sources of pollution to better allocate ever-dwindling resources on the state and federal level. This cleanup really makes a huge difference!"

BBB Scam Alert: How To Protect Your Verified Social Media Account

By BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU

Social media has long been a favorite haunt of scammers. In this new phishing scam, con artists are going after businesses and individuals with verified accounts – a measure that was supposed to help prevent scams!

How the scam works

You receive a direct message or email that appears to come directly from Twitter, Instagram, or another social media platform. It states that your verified account has been flagged, and you'll need to re-verify it. You could allegedly lose your verified account badge if you don't respond. For example, some Twitter users have reported receiving direct messages or emails stating that their blue verified badge has been marked as spam and, if they don't appeal the decision, it will be deleted.

The scam message asks you to click on a link or download a form to start the appeal process and re-verify your account. If you click, you may download malware onto your laptop or mobile device. This can collect your personal data without your knowledge. If you fill out forms or reply with the requested information, scammers may be able to hack your account or use your personal information to commit identity theft.

How to avoid social media scams

• Understand how social media platforms work. Get to know a social media platform's policies before you start using it. For example, Twitter never sends emails with a request for login credentials, nor do they send emails with attachments. If you are clear on the platform's policies and procedures, you'll be less likely to fall for correspondence from a scammer – even if it looks legit.

• Be wary of unsolicited messages. Whether it's a DM, an email, or a message on a messaging app, be skeptical about out-of-the-blue messages, especially if they ask you to click on links or open attachments. Instead, go straight to the source – the platform's official customer service center – to find out if the message is real.

• Look for the signs of a scam. Poor spelling, bad grammar, pressure to act now, and scare tactics are all red flags that indicate a scam.

• Always protect your personal information. Never give your login credentials or other personal information to a stranger without verifying the legitimacy of their request. Most reputable companies won't ask you for your login information.

Amy K. Kelly Weds Benjamin E. Roskamp

Amy Kelly of North Quincy and Benjamin Roskamp of Des Moines, Iowa, were married Thursday, Aug. 11th in Harwich Port.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Kelly of North Quincy. The groom is the son of Mr. Gordon Roskamp of Adel, Iowa, and Mrs. Denise Gustavson of Windsor Heights, Iowa.

The ceremony, officiated by Kyle Barichello, was held along the pier of Wychmere Harbor; followed by a reception in the Ocean Room with panoramic views of the ocean at the Wychmere Beach Club.

Even though they met while both in their late 20s, you could say Amy and Ben have been high school sweethearts since early 2019; they met at the Quincy High School career fair where they were speaking to students about possible career choices.

Amy was working for the Quincy Credit Union and was talking about careers in marketing while only a few tables over Benjamin, a Paramedic for Brewster Ambulance, was discussing careers as a first responder. When class was dismissed that day, the adventures of Amy and Ben began almost immediately.

Traveling to Maine, California, Italy, Germany, Switzerland, and France, they discovered how much they both enjoyed new experiences and how well they were able to solve problems together. Adventure after adventure, they didn't stop, and Ben knew that Amy was the one person that he wanted to spend the rest of his life with. Ben and Amy got engaged, at Yellowstone National Park during an amazing trip to Montana in July 2020. Since the engagement, Benjamin has started his career as a firefighter for the Town of Sharon, and they have welcomed Piper, a lovely golden retriever, into their family. The newlyweds currently own a home in Squantum where they look forward to growing their family.

Movie Review: 'Dragon Ball Super: Super Hero'

By BOB GARVER

NOTE: This movie is available in both an English-dubbed version and a Japanese version with English subtitles. This review is based on The English-dubbed version.

Here we are with another anime movie based on a property that is entirely unfamiliar to me. Actually, that's not true - I've at least heard of "Dragon Ball" (though this is the first time I haven't seen a "Z" attached) and I know its main character is named Goku. That's more than I can say for recent big-screen versions of "Demon Slayer" and "Jujutsu Kaisen," but I know it isn't much help. Just remember that everything that follows is from the perspective of someone who is very late to the "Dragon Ball" party.

The film largely follows characters that are descended from supposedly familiar players. Evil tycoon Magenta, the son of previous villain Commander Red, teams up with Dr. Hedo, the brilliant-but-arrogant grandson of evil scientist Dr. Gero, to reform the defunct Red Ribbon Army and create androids that can take over the world. Hedo creates formidable fighters Gamma 1 and Gamma 2 as a sort of warm-up. The two think they're superheroes working for the good guys, hence the film's title. But Hedo's real assignment is to perfect Cell Max, a massive being capable of unimaginable destruction. I hate it when villains seek to cause irreparable damage to the planet in the name of ruling it - do they really want to take over a massive crater? - but clearly Magenta is set on going in this direction.

Opposing the new evil alliance is Piccolo, a humanoid alien and former adversary of Goku, now an honorable fighter that previously trained Goku's son Gohan and is currently training Gohan's daughter Pan. Piccolo wants Gohan to join the fight against the new Red Ribbon Army, but Gohan may have gone soft since settling down with his family. Perhaps Piccolo can reach out to some old friends for help. Or maybe he can use wishes from a Dragon Ball to make himself more powerful. Wait, that's what the Dragon Balls do, grant wishes three at a time? Quick, somebody use a Dragon Ball to make the bad guys evaporate or something. Someone comments that Piccolo has too much pride to use a Dragon Ball wish like that, but what's everyone else's excuse? Actually, the wasting of two Dragon Ball wishes is probably the funniest scene in the movie.

By the way, there's a subplot about Goku and friends Vegeta and Broly on a planet controlled by Beerus, the God of Destruction. All Goku and company do is spar with one another and all Beerus does is feast and nap. There's a tease that they'll get involved in the battle on Earth, but nothing ever comes of it. The sequence only serves as a poor excuse to get Goku in the movie and it's a huge waste of time.

Unnecessary cameos aside, a lot of character-driven scenes in this movie work. I found it easy to get wrapped up in Piccolo and his frustration in trying to find assistance, Dr. Hedo and his drive to continue his research by any means necessary, and Gohan and his reluctant return to heroism. Even the Gamma androids have more personality and a stricter moral code than it would seem at first glance.

As with many animes, "Dragon Ball Super: Super Hero" can't stick the landing with the climactic battle. Cell Max is a big, dumb, hollow character, and Magenta before him was an unremarkable megalomaniac, save for how remarkably hard it was to take him seriously. Death blows are dealt about four times and usually turn out to be fake-outs, forcing the already-overlong battle to continue. Still, there's a lot to like about "Dragon Ball Super: Super Hero," even if you're new to the series, though I'm sure fans will find even more of value.

Grade: B-

"Dragon Ball Super: Super Hero" is rated PG-13 for some action/violence and smoking. Its running time is 100 minutes.

Sweet Potato Salad

By MARIE

I saw this recipe while watching the Food Network, but thought I would save you all some time when you are wondering what kind of side you would like to serve with your summer barbeque or dinner.

Directions and Ingredients:

4 large sweet potatoes, peeled and cut into bite-sized pieces.

While potatoes are boiling in a bowl add:

- 1 red bell pepper, diced small
- 2 scallions, cut in small pieces; both the white and green part
- ½ cup of mayonnaise
- ½ cup Greek yogurt, plain
- Salt and Pepper to taste

Mix all ingredients well. Once cooled, add the potatoes and the zest of the orange and ½ cup apple cider vinegar; mix until well blended.

Peach Radicchio, Quinoa Salad

By SUZIE

Salads can get boring after a while, but they really are a delicious and easy way to take in a healthy meal in the summer. This can be made ahead of time and quinoa (pronounced KEENWA) is considered a complete protein because it contains the proper amino acid profile.

Great for vegetarians, but you certainly do not have to be a vegetarian to enjoy quinoa. It is super easy to digest, and for culinary purposes is considered a grain, but it actually is a seed.

This salad is packed with nutrition and is considered a "nutrient dense" meal. Meaning, there is a lot of nutrition packed into every bite.

Radicchio and parsley are loaded with important vitamins and minerals, walnuts contain the very important essential fatty acid for brain and heart health, and peaches are a delicious in season fruit containing fiber and also packed with important vitamins and phytonutrients.

Extra virgin olive oil is a healthy mono-unsaturated fat that has been linked across the board to better all around health, not to mention beautiful skin and hair.

PEACH RADICCHIO AND QUINOA SALAD

- 3 Tbsp extra virgin olive oil
- 2 tablespoons sherry vinegar (or apple cider vinegar or lemon juice)
- 1 teaspoon dijon mustard
- sea salt and pepper to taste
- 2 large FIRM peaches, diced (keep the skin on for extra fiber and nutrients)
- 1 head of radicchio, coarsely chopped
- 1 c packed fresh flat leaf parsley (Italian)
- ¼ cup walnuts, chopped
- 2 cups cooked quinoa COOLED (follow package directions. I always cook mine in broth for extra flavor! you should too!)

Just mix all together and serve, drizzling with some extra olive oil before serving. Enjoy!

Chicken And Sausage Soup My Son Dom's Favorite

By MARIE

"When in doubt serve soup" was often the adage expressed by me and my family. Around our house soup was always a welcome entrée, whether it was summertime or winter, my family always loved soup.

I used to make this soup using chicken legs, thighs and Italian sausage and the result was always very hardy and satisfying. My son, Dom, would often times finish it cold for breakfast and say it was the best soup I ever made. He should know because he has loved soup since he was a toddler.

Ingredients and Directions

- 2 chicken legs
- 2 chicken thighs
- 4 Italian sausages
- 1 quart of chicken stock
- (Enough water to cover all of the chicken meat)

- 2 large stalks of celery, cut up
- 1 medium onion, cut up
- ½ pound cheese-filled tortellini
- 1 bag of fresh spinach
- Grated Romano or parmesan cheese

Begin by putting the chicken and sausages and the water and the quart of chicken stock in a pot.

While this is cooking add celery, onion and fresh parsley if preferred.

Cook covered for at least 1 hour and set aside.

Remove chicken and sausage and cut sausages in slices and cut the chicken in small bite-sized pieces and return to soup.

Boil the tortellini according to directions and when all meat is tender put the spinach in the soup.

Then add the tortellini at the end and top with grated cheese.

Tuesday, Sept. 6 Primary Day In Massachusetts

Some 7,000 registered voters had requested a mail-in ballot as of the morning of Aug. 23, according to Assistant City Clerk Joseph Newton. Monday was the final day to ask for a mail-in ballot.

Voters can return their ballots by mail using the provided envelope, which does not require the voter to pay for postage. Quincy voters can also drop off their ballots in the ballot drop-box located outside City Hall, 1305 Hancock St. in Quincy Center, or return their ballot in-person to the Election Department on the second floor of the glass City Hall annex building. Ballots can also be brought to the city's in-person early voting locations while they are open for early voting.

For the primary, ballots must be received by election officials no later than 8 p.m. on Tuesday, Sept. 6, in order to be counted. Ballots received after the deadline, even if postmarked on or before Sept. 6, will not be counted.

In-person early voting began this weekend at North Quincy High School and will continue through Friday at City Hall. Polls will be open there, from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., each day through Friday.

Absentee balloting is also available for the election. To qualify, a voter must be away from their city or town on the day of the election or have a disability or religious belief that prevents them from going to the polls that day. The deadline for absentee balloting is noon on Friday.

City Clerk Nicole Crispo is predicting a turnout of 25 percent in Quincy for the state primary. That number is based on the number of mail-in ballots requested as well as the ability to cast ballots early by mail and in-person. The turnout in the September 2018 state primary election — for which neither of those early voting options was available — was 19.91 percent in Quincy.

The deadline for residents to register to vote in the Sept. 6 primary passed on Saturday.

As in years past, unenrolled voters can request either a Democratic or Republican ballot in the primary, without having to join that party.

The top vote getters in the primary election will move on to the general election on Tuesday, Nov. 8.

Headlining this year's contests in Massachusetts is the race for the open governor's seat. Incumbent Republican Gov. Charlie Baker currently the state's attorney general, is unopposed. State Sen. Sonia Chang-Diaz's name also appears on the ballot but she has withdrawn from the primary.

In the Democratic primary, Maura Healey of Boston,

The Republican primary features a two-way race for the nomination. The contest is between Geoff Diehl of Whitman, a former state representative, and Wrentham businessman Chris Doughty.

There are also competitive primaries in the race for lieutenant governor.

Running on the Democratic side are three candidates: Salem Mayor Kimberly Driscoll; state Rep. Tami Gouveia of Acton; and state Sen. Eric Lesser of Longmeadow.

Two candidates are facing off in the GOP primary, Leah Allen of Danvers and Kate Campanale of Spencer. Both are former state representatives.

In the race to replace Healey as attorney general, three candidates are running in the Democratic primary. In the running are Andrea Campbell, a former Boston city councillor; attorney Shannon Liss-Riordan of Brookline; and Quentin Palfrey, a former assistant attorney general, of Weston.

The winner of that primary will face attorney James McMahon of Bourne in November. He is unopposed in the Republican primary.

primary for the same seat: Robert Burke of Milton and Hamilton Soares Rodrigues of Canton.

Seats in the state legislature on Beacon Hill are also up for grabs this year.

Incumbent Sen. John Keenan of the Norfolk-Plymouth District, which includes all of Quincy, is unopposed in the Democratic primary. In the Republican primary, Gary Innes of Hanover is likewise running unopposed.

One of Quincy's three state representatives, all Democrats, is facing a challenger in the primary. The primary in the First Norfolk District pits incumbent Rep. Bruce Ayers against Casey Dooley; both are Quincy residents. No Republican is running in that district.

Rep. Tackey Chan of the Second Norfolk District and Rep. Ronald Mariano of the Third Norfolk District are both unopposed in their respective primaries.

Chan will face a Republican challenger - Sharon Cintolo of Quincy - in November while Mariano, the speaker of the House, does not have a GOP opponent.

The Democratic primary also includes a contest for Norfolk County commissioner between incumbent Peter Collins of Milton and Paul Yorkis of Medway, a former member of the town's planning board.

The November election will also include a race for the Fourth District Governor's Council seat between incumbent Democrat Christopher Iannella Jr. and Republican Helene "Teddy" MacNeal, both Boston residents.

Norfolk District Attorney Michael Morrissey and Norfolk County Sheriff Patrick McDermott, both Quincy Democrats, are also on this year's ballot. Both are unopposed in the primary and neither will have a Republican opponent in November.

Norfolk & Plymouth District To Receive $2.5M In Bond Bill

The general government bond bill recently passed by the Legislature and signed into law by Gov. Charlie Baker included $2.5 million in authorizations for the five communities of the Norfolk & Plymouth Senate District.

The five separate line items were submitted and advocated for by Sen. John F. Keenan. If appropriated by the governor in a future capital plan, the Commonwealth will release these funds for new and ongoing projects in each community.

"Any bit of funding that we can bring back into our communities is helpful. This money will have an especially concentrated benefit as it will directly support projects that have been prioritized by each municipality," said Sen. Keenan.

The bond bill includes significant funding for the dredging of the Wollaston channel, as well as the waters off Merrymount Beach in Quincy.

It also includes an allocation for the planned reconstruction of Hawthorn Road in Braintree.

As Rockland continues efforts to secure funding for water infrastructure, the bond bill contains an allocation of $750,000 for construction of new inflow and infiltration infrastructure, as well as rehabilitation of existing infrastructure.

Through the bond bill, money has been authorized for Abington's study of the town's water needs, and funds have been designated for general road and sidewalk improvements throughout the town of Holbrook.

"It is my hope," said Sen. Keenan, "that the next Governor will recognize the importance of these various projects and release the funding so that they can be completed."

ing with those mistakes is not fair to anyone in the city, except the developer gets to leave with their pockets full."

Other speakers commented on the permitting process that unfolded for 105 Sea St. The process began last fall and included hearings before the Zoning Board of Appeals and the Planning Board, the latter of which approved the project earlier in August.

"They're just trying to wear us down," said Molly McDonald Long of Wampatuck Road. "Maybe because we're working class, maybe because they know people have to go to work and can't always make a 6 o'clock meeting, and they are just going to wear us down, because at the end of the day, it's about one thing for them...money."

One resident, John Rodophele of Grenwood Road, spoke in favor of the application. He said the city needs new growth to help keep property taxes in check. Rodophele also questioned why some larger projects have easily moved through the approval process while others have faced a "witch hunt."

The city's three at-large councillors — Noel DiBona, Nina Liang and Anne Mahoney — all voiced their opposition to the project. DiBona and Mahoney spoke during the public hearing while Liang provided written comments.

DiBona expressed concerns about the impact the development would have on traffic, both on Sea Street and side streets, adding that Merrymount is already a "cut-through neighborhood" for traffic.

"The folks have reached out to me and that's why I'm here tonight," DiBona said. "A lot of folks have reached out to me via email, phone calls and in-person. I'm here in opposition. I know the developers worked from 32 to 24 to 21 to 20 to 18 [units], but the folks and the residents still don't want it. I just hope you make the right decision."

Mahoney said she had not heard at all from the developer "as to what the hardship is that they need to build" 18 units on site. She said the board should follow the city's zoning code and not approve a project, "just because a developer wants to develop something or because we're gung-ho to have Quincy have as many units as we can possibly have."

"Smart growth is good but just letting things happen is not," Mahoney said.

"This is too big, it's too dangerous."

In her letter to the board, Liang said she was concerned about negative impacts the project could have on the area.

"I have heard from numerous area residents who have expressed concerns on the size of the project being proposed, the potential impact on flooding, traffic and parking concerns in an already congested area," Liang said. "I raise these issues in hopes that the board will consider them during your deliberation. Any negative impact would be most unwelcome in the area."

Ward 1 Councillor David McCarthy said a commercial use on site, like another restaurant, could generate more traffic than an 18-unit residential building.

"If it's a commercial entity that ends up there, talk about traffic," he said. "The China Star and Imperial Terrace were there for years, no one worried about traffic coming in and out of there, and there was some scary traffic in and out of the China Star, and it was always packed."

McCarthy added that a smaller residential development might not be "robust enough to make that site look like it should," but also said he would "like it to be a little smaller" than the most recent iteration of the plan.

Several people within the audience jeered McCarthy during his remarks, with one person asking McCarthy to state directly whether or not he was opposing the project. The comments from the audience prompted board chairman Martin Aikens to recess the meeting temporarily; McCarthy was given the chance to speak again following the recess but declined to do so.

After the public hearing ended, several members of the five-person board said they could not support the project in light of the public opposition.

"We have been put on this board to accommodate building...and stretching of rules when it doesn't make a situation worse than it currently is," said John Himmel. "In all good conscience, I just could not support a unit of this size negatively affecting a neighborhood that is obviously well-versed and well-concerned about the place they live."

Russell Chin shared the sentiment and said that, moving forward, if the developer comes up with plans for a different residential use on site, neighbors should consider the impact of that development compared to what could be built there by right.

"Given the fact that there is so much opposition, I in good conscience cannot vote in favor of the petition," Chin said. "If you guys get together and you have another meeting, consider what could go in there and consider what they're presenting to you and how much traffic and how much safety issues it is truly going to be in comparison to what could go in there by right."

Board vice chairman Brian Radell said he would "have a very difficult time supporting this based on the neighborhood's response," but stated that "it's almost a be-careful-for-what-you-wish-for" situation.

"If somebody put a restaurant in there tomorrow that actually has some traction, 150 [vehicle] trips a day is going to be nothing. They're going to do that in an hour," Radell said. "You talk about safety concerns, we're not going to have any control over that because it's an allowed use today."

Following the comments from the board members, Aikens offered Carroll the option to withdraw the request without prejudice rather than have the board vote down the application. Carroll agreed to withdraw the request at that point.

Legislature Passes $11.3 Billion Transportation, Infrastructure Bill

The Legislature's final version of the transportation bond bill was enacted by both the House and Senate and signed by the Governor. It authorizes over $11.3 billion for transportation and infrastructure projects, including $400 million for the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority (MBTA) to address ongoing safety concerns identified by the Federal Transit Administration's Safety Management Inspection.

"I'm incredibly proud of the work done by the Legislature to ensure that several of the Commonwealth's most vital transportation infrastructure projects are sufficiently funded," said House Speaker Ronald Mariano (D-Quincy). "As the MBTA continues to address ongoing safety concerns, and as the East-West passenger rail project begins, this package demonstrates the Legislature's commitment to investing in these meaningful efforts, and to continuing support for other improvements to roads and bridges across Massachusetts. I want to thank Chairman Straus and the conferees, my colleagues in the House, as well as Senate President Spilka and our partners in the Senate, for the hard work that ultimately facilitated the passage of this legislation."

"This legislation will make significant investments in our transportation infrastructure, including our roads, bridges, and public transport systems," said

Social Security Matters

Ask Rusty – Military Wife Turning 65 Seeks Information About Medicare

By RUSSELL GLOOR

National Social Security Advisor
at the AMAC Foundation, The Non-Profit Arm of the Association of Mature American Citizens

Dear Rusty: My husband is 63 and I will be 65 in a few months. He's retired from the Air Force, so we currently have Tricare Select. As I understand it, I only need to sign up for Medicare Part B, which I think I can do now. Can I do this online, or do I need to go somewhere to enroll? And how do I find the cost? We also currently are enrolled in and pay for FEDVIP for our dental and vision. Is vision handled under Medicare? All our adult life we've just used Air Force bases and now we have to pay attention and we don't know where to start. Any guidance is appreciated. Signed: Retired Military Wife

Dear Military Wife: First, please extend my gratitude to your husband for his military service. I'm happy to assist you with your questions.

With few exceptions (mainly those on active duty and military reservists) Tricare requires that you enroll in Medicare Part B as soon as you are eligible (age 65) to retain your Tricare coverage. If you're already collecting Social Security, you'll be automatically enrolled in Medicare Part A and Part B at age 65 and won't need to do a separate enrollment. If not, enrolling can be easily done online by going to this link: www.ssa.gov/benefits/medicare/. Here you'll see an explanation of how Medicare works, and you can scroll down to the "Apply for Medicare Only" tab to start your application. You will need to first have your personal "my Social Security" online account set up to apply online for Medicare, which is easy to do at www.ssa.gov/myaccount. You should enroll in Medicare during your Initial Enrollment Period (IEP) which starts 3 months before the month you turn 65 and ends three months after the month you turn 65. So, if you are within 3 months of age 65 you can enroll in Medicare now and your coverage will start in the month you turn 65. Your Medicare coverage will start on the first of the month you turn 65, even if your birthday isn't until later in the month. If you have any trouble enrolling in Medicare online, you can call Social Security at 1.800.772.1213 to enroll in Medicare.

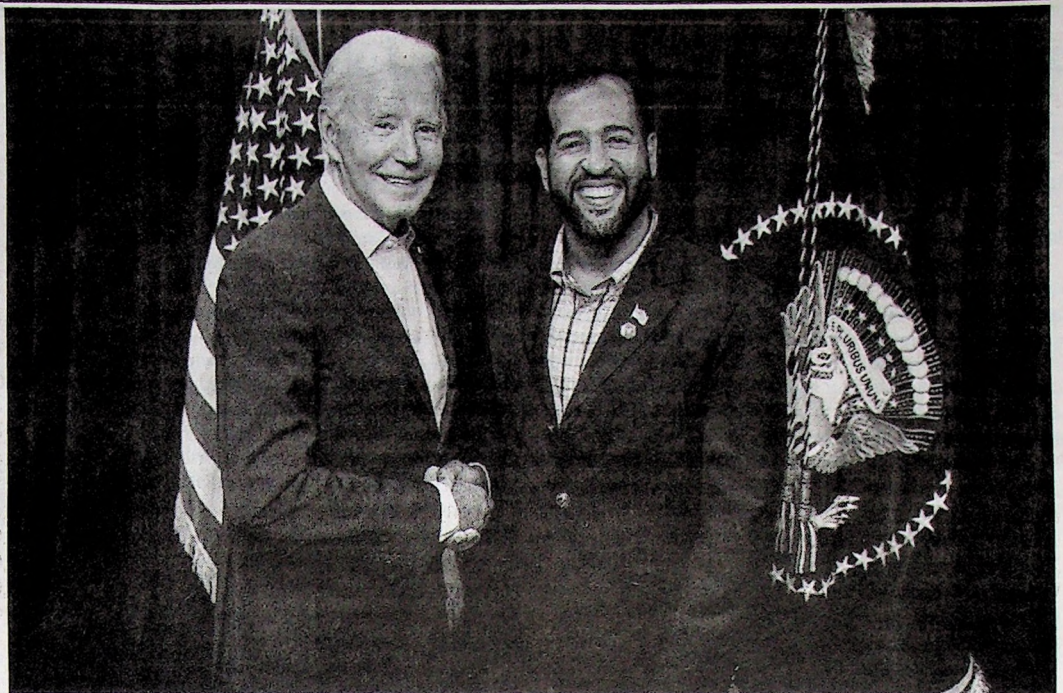

It's important to understand Medicare's various "parts." Medicare Part A is coverage for inpatient hospitalization services and is free for anyone who is also eligible for Social Security (you don't need to be collecting SS, only eligible to). Medicare Part B is coverage for outpatient medical services (e.g., doctors, tests, etc.) and there is a monthly premium associated with Part B. The 2022 Part B premium is $170.10 per month and, unless you're on Social Security, you'll make arrangements when you enroll in Medicare to pay those premiums separately, usually quarterly. If you're already collecting Social Security, the Medicare Part B premium will be deducted from your monthly SS payment. When your Medicare coverage starts, Medicare will become the primary payor of your healthcare expenses and Tricare will become secondary payor.

Medicare Part C is an "Advantage" plan obtained through a private insurer and used instead of Part A and Part B. Medicare also has a Part D which is for prescription drug coverage, and which you probably won't need because Tricare likely covers any prescription drug needs you may have.

Medicare Part B does not provide routine dental services, and only provides very limited vision services (screenings for glaucoma, diabetic retinopathy, and screening for and treatment of macular degeneration), but routine eye screenings, contacts, eyeglasses, and frames, etc., are not covered. Tricare's vision coverage is also very limited, so if your current FEDVIP is not adequate for your needs, you may wish to explore your options for private dental and vision coverage.

About us

Atlantic Coast Engineering ("A.C.E.") is a full-service engineering, surveying, and construction management firm with offices in Scituate, MA, Quincy, MA, Hingham, MA and West Palm Beach, FL.

On Tuesday, Aug. 23, at approximately 10:30 a.m., Detective Carthas was working a private detail and requested units to the area of 1245 Hancock St. for an unknown emergency.

While en-route to the call, Detective Carthas updated dispatch that a vehicle had just driven through the construction zone and struck two other officers working the detail. Several units responded, along with paramedics from Brewster Ambulance Service.

Upon arrival, Officer Donovan observed several bright orange construction signs indicating there was a work zone with police officers on duty. The construction cones stretched from Huntley Road, approximately 300 feet northbound, to the area of 1150 Hancock St., which closed off the right northbound travel lane. Officer Donovan observed a female party detained at the rear of a white "U-Haul" van, which was resting up against a row of concrete jersey barriers in the right northbound lane in front of 1170 Hancock St. The vehicle was inside the orange cones. Officer Donovan observed the tire tracks, which were three-four feet inside the work site, and stretched approximately 150 feet through the site itself.

One officer stated that he was standing on the crosswalk at 1200 Hancock St. assisting pedestrians in the area, while a second officer was assisting pedestrians through the work zone. Detective Carthas was on the other end of the construction zone doing traffic control. The officer turned his head to the right and noticed a U-Haul van taking out cones and continuing straight for him and a second officer who were in close to each other. Both officers had to brace themselves using their body and arms. Both officers bounced off the van which continued to hit the jersey barriers. Officers ran after the vehicle and were able to put the van in park and remove the operator from the driver's seat.

As they opened the door, they observed a female holding an aerosol can of what they believed to be Dust Off in her right hand. She presented with extremely dismayed pupils and stuttered/slurred speech. Officers removed her from the vehicle and placed her into handcuffs. Detective Carthas then called off the incident to Quincy Police Dispatch.

Officer Donovan then went and observed the vehicle. He spoke to the passenger who immediately stated, "Is everyone okay? I told her to stop doing that s@#% but she's been doing it since Weymouth!" Officer Donovan then asked the passenger what she was referring to and the passenger pulled out a can of "Falcon Dust-Off" compressed gas duster, which was located in a purse on the driver's seat.

The passenger stated that as she was driving from Weymouth, the operator was continuously "huffing" the can the entire ride. She stated that on several different occasions the operator traveled through red lights and almost struck several vehicles, to include multiple near head-on collisions. Luckily, all other vehicles were able to swerve out of the way. The passenger stated she was pleading for the driver to stop.

Based on Officer Donovan's training and experience, he knows that the fumes from cans of duster release toxic vapors which can be inhaled or "huffed" for the purpose of causing a condition of intoxication, exhilaration, or dulled senses. The passenger was medically cleared and sent on her way.

A witness/worker stated he observed the entire incident. He stated the work crew was cutting the asphalt in preparation to dig up the area. His attention was drawn to the U-Haul van because it appeared to narrowly pass by the detail officer on the south side of the construction zone (Detective Carthas).

All of a sudden, the vehicle picked up speed as it traveled through an entire row of construction cones, over the area the work crew had just cut, and struck the other two detail officers on the north side of the work site. The vehicle then struck the jersey barriers and almost climbed completely up and over the barriers. He then showed Officer Donovan the tire markings on several of the jersey barriers, which stopped just a few inches from the top of the barrier.

The 40-year-old female from Quincy was arrested and transported to the Quincy Police Station. She was charged with operating of the influence/drugs, reckless operation of a motor vehicle, marked lanes violation, and inhaling a substance releasing toxic vapor (huffing).

The cans of Dust-Off were seized and placed into evidence. A motor vehicle crash report was filed and an immediate threat filed with the Registry of Motor Vehicles.

COVID-19 guidance ahead of the upcoming school year, based upon recent guidelines set by the US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. The new state guidelines drop many of the masking and testing requirements previously in place.

"Obviously DESE has issued the new COVID regulations that we're supposed to follow. Essentially, we're back to normal," Quincy Supt. Kevin Mulvey said in a recent interview.

"There is no mask requirement, but if students feel comfortable wearing masks, or staff, they can certainly do so. There is obviously no problem with that."

"There is no test-and-stay. There is no quarantining of asymptomatic students and staff. In other words, even if they were a close contact and they are asymptomatic, they still come to school as normal."

Students and staff who do test positive will have to isolate at home, Mulvey noted.

"If they test positive, that's something different," he said. "They would have to follow the quarantine regulations at that point."

Those who test positive have to isolate at home for five days, per the CDC guidelines. They can leave their house after five days, if they have no symptoms or their symptoms are resolving, but are required to wear a mask around others for five additional days. If the individual has a fever, they must continue to stay home until the fever resolves.

While there is no more schoolwide mask mandate in place, Mulvey noted masks will be required at the health offices within the schools, in accordance with the DESE guidance.

"The health offices will require masking. That's the only area within the schools that will continue to have masking, and we have plenty of PPE, masks, for that," the superintendent said.

Students no longer have to wear masks on buses, Mulvey later added.

The Quincy Public Schools will continue to partner with Manet Community Health Center to help students and staff get vaccinated against COVID-19.

"We're still partnering with Manet, so Manet is still available for people who haven't been vaccinated yet, or staff," Mulvey said. "DESE has recommended that we continue our partnership with our local community health center to provide vaccinations if people are looking for it."

Residents can look up additional sites where the COVID-19 vaccine is available online at vaxfinder.mass.gov, the superintendent noted.

The vast majority of students and staff have gotten their shots, Mulvey said, based on the number of people vaccinated by Manet and publicly available data from the state Department of Public Health.

As of Aug. 24, 91 percent of all Quincy residents between the ages of 16 and 19 – which includes Quincy Public Schools students and others – were considered fully vaccinated, according to the DPH data. In the 12- to 15-year old age range, 84 percent of all Quincy residents were fully vaccinated, as were 66 percent of city residents between ages 5 and 11. (Overall, 81 percent of all Quincy residents were fully vaccinated as of that date.)

As the school district ramps up for the new year, Mulvey said new staff members were set for orientation this week.

"We have about 80 new hires, which is a lot. Usually it's around 50 to 60," he said, adding those are all new teachers.

The district has also hired new security guards this year.

"We have hired three new security guards. Two of those new guards will be at Quincy High School and one will be at North Quincy High School," Mulvey said.

"That's going to help a lot with regard to everything from just managing student behavior to trying to tamp down vaping issues in the bathrooms, which is a concern I know of parents."

In addition, the school system has new IT staff on hand and will be ready to distribute more than 7,000 Chromebooks to students in the fall.

"We've hired new IT staff for information technology purposes. We have all of our 7,000 plus Chromebooks up and ready and cleaned and revamped for our students," Mulvey said. "In the case of a resurgence of COVID, we will have that, and the students will use them anyway as part of the new technology advancements that we're making in the system."

Those computers are primarily for students in grades 3 and above, he explained.

"They're not really as useful for kindergarten through 1 and 2. That's not to say they're not used at all in those areas, but primarily our focus would be on grades 3 and above for our Chromebooks," he said.

While the district is still in need of new bus drivers, the superintendent said all routes will be covered.

"We'll have enough to make sure all of the routes are covered and we're also using outside vendors to cover some of the routes as well," he said. "But we absolutely are looking for bus drivers and bus monitors."

High Schools To Share AD; Two Assistants To Be Hired

By SCOTT JACKSON

Following the departure of North Quincy High School's athletic director, Quincy's two public high schools will have the same athletic director, with a new assistant AD in place inside both buildings.

JJ Niamkey, who was named the athletic director at North in September 2017, was recently hired as the new athletic director at Northwell High School. Quincy Supt. Kevin Mulvey said that Kevin Mahoney, who was named Quincy High School's athletics director in September 2017, will now serve as the AD at both schools.

"I've been obviously having discussions with School Committee," Mulvey said in a recent interview. "What we're going to do is revert back to the old model, so Kevin Mahoney will take on the responsibility of both schools as the primary director of athletics and wellness. Then we're going to hire two assistants, so one assistant at Quincy High and one assistant at North that will help run the athletic operations."

"We've already reached an agreement with Kevin Mahoney and he's now in that position and we will now develop an assistant director job position and post it and we'll be interviewing candidates for those positions. We have to also develop a budget for those positions too."

The district formerly had one athletic director for the two high schools, and Mulvey said Mahoney's experience would make it possible to use that model again for the foreseeable future.

"The reason why we had switched to the new model which is now the old model – meaning two athletic directors – is we essentially had two-brand new athletic directors who were relatively inexperienced," Mulvey said.

"Kevin Mahoney now has been on the since Jim Rendle left, probably five years at least, so he has all the experience and we felt he has the experience and qualifications to handle both positions as the overall director supervising the two assistant directors, one at each high school."

In addition, Mulvey earlier this summer named Lawrence Taglieri, formerly the principal at Quincy High, the district's director of academic programs. Some of Taglieri's new duties overlap with Mahoney's.

"Larry is the director of academic programs so there is overlap between his supervision of the physical education instructors and health instructors. That overlaps into Kevin Mahoney's world as athletic director and director of wellness," Mulvey said.

"So, they will be working together on initiatives that overlap, including athletics, physical education and health and wellness programs within the Quincy Public Schools."

For the time being, Mahoney will continue to work out of Quincy High School, but Mulvey hopes to find room for him within the district's administrative offices at the Coddington Building.

"We're looking at space at Coddington to have him centrally located at Coddington. If that's doable, he'll be located at Coddington. If not, at least temporarily, he'll be housed at Quincy High until we can free up some space at Coddington for that, but I would prefer him to be centrally located with us," Mulvey said, adding that the offices for the new assistant ADs will be at their respective high school.

Mulvey said he hopes to hire candidates "familiar with the athletics programs in Quincy, if possible" to serve as the new assistant athletic directors.

"We'll follow the typical job posting and interview process," the superintendent said. "In this particular case, we will have each high school principal in the interview committee as well as the athletic director and myself. Obviously, we will vet the candidates and then interview the candidates and choose who we feel is the best candidate for the position."

Over the summer, crews have been working to ready schools for the new academic year. Among those projects was the removal of asbestos from school buildings, including the Montclair and Wollaston Elementary Schools, Mulvey said.

"We've been removing asbestos in a number of schools this year as well. This is something we do every summer. Paul Hines has been doing a really good job," Mulvey said, referring to the city's commissioner of public buildings. "There isn't much left in the district, which is great."

The asbestos remaining inside schools is primarily in floor tiles, the superintendent said.

"It's usually in the floor tiles, the old floor tiles. So, the old floor tiles are ripped up and it's obviously following all the asbestos protocols for ventilation and taping off and containment, and then a new floor is put down in its place," he said.

"Mainly it is the floor tiles but there may be some areas like the heating pipes and that sort of thing. What's been happening is we get new boilers through these accelerated repair programs, all that is taken care of at that same time."

"So, we're really getting down the amount of asbestos in schools. They've been doing a great job. I think it's almost nearly all gone, which is great."

Mulvey emphasized that there is no risk of asbestos exposure to students or staff, because any that remains within school buildings is properly contained.

"It doesn't pose a risk to any students or staff," he said. "And, of course the material that was removed was done under obviously all the appropriate environmental protocols and all that."

The city is also constructing a new play area on the grounds of the Point Webster Middle School, replacing the concrete that was there with a new synthetic turf. The field should be ready by the time school opens, or soon afterwards, Mulvey said.

"All the preliminary supplies have arrived, and I think they're just waiting on the turf to complete the project," he said. "We're hoping that will be ready for the start of the school year. If not, that will be ready shortly thereafter."

"That will be a huge improvement down there, which is great."

The school system is also partnering with the Massachusetts School Building Authority to replace or renovate the Squantum Elementary School. Mulvey said the city would put out a request for services to identify an owner's project manager for that project in September.

In addition, the superintendent noted the MSBA recently approved three accelerated repair projects within the Quincy Public Schools - the replacement of roofs at Montclair and Wollaston and a new boiler for the Parker Elementary School. That work will likely be done next summer, he said, but the boiler may be replaced sooner if one can be procured.

This year's school calendar will look similar to previous years, with one notable change. Schools will be closed on Election Day, Tuesday, Nov. 8, this year. Schools had previously been closed on Election Day in presidential election years, including 2016 and 2020, but were open during the most recent gubernatorial election in 2018.

In addition to Election Day, schools will be closed for Columbus Day in October; Veterans Day, Thanksgiving Day and the Friday after Thanksgiving in November; Martin Luther King Jr. Day in January; Good Friday in April; and Memorial Day in May. Schools would also be closed on Juneteenth in June if the school year extends that far.

Winter recess will begin at the end of the school day on Friday, Dec. 23, and classes will resume on Tuesday, Jan. 3. February recess will begin at the end of the school day on Friday, Feb. 17, and classes will resume on Monday, Feb. 27. April recess begins at the end of the day on Friday, April 14, and classes will resume on Monday, April 24.

Assuming there are no snow days, the last day of classes would be Friday, June 16. If five days of classes are cancelled, the last day of school would be Monday, June 26. The last day for professional staff is the day after the final day of classes.

The last day of school for high school seniors will be Wednesday, May 31. Quincy High's graduation is set for Monday, June 5, and North Quincy High's will be the following day.

Early release days will remain on Wednesdays in the new school year. Traditionally, early release days had been scheduled on Tuesdays, but they were moved to Wednesdays for the 2020-21 school year for scheduling purposes amid the pandemic. The school board agreed to keep them on Wednesdays based on feedback from parents and educators.

BBB Tip: Be Safe When Sharing Back To School Photos Of Your Kids

By BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU

With the school year starting again, social media is full of adorable back-to-school photos. Often, these pictures feature a child holding a "first day of school" sign with basic information, such as their name and grade. But before you jump on the trend and snap a similar picture of your little one, read these tips and be cautious about what you share.

Back-to-school photo tips

- Avoid sharing personal details about your child. Back-to-school photos often involve kids holding a board with their full name, age, height, and other details. Scammers or predators could use this information to commit identity theft or earn your child's trust.

- Leave off information about kids' schools. Even sharing the name of your child's school, teacher, or grade level could make them a target for unscrupulous people. Not to mention, these details are often used as security questions for banking or credit card accounts.

- Double check your privacy settings. Review your social media account's privacy settings regularly. Be mindful of whom can view your posts. You may want to remove personal information from your account that others can see, such as your telephone number or address.

- Watch out for phony friend requests. Don't accept friend requests from strangers. Also, think twice before you accept a friend request from someone you are already connected with. It could be an impostor trying to access your information and friends list.

Quincy Art Association Artist Showcase: Troy Zarccone

"I was born in Mississippi and spent my childhood on Air Force bases around the world before my parents settled in Florida. I earned a degree in psychology at the University of Florida and continued a nomadic lifestyle in academia living in Maryland, Kansas, and upstate New York.

"Throughout that time, I dabbled in photography, drawing and painting taking art classes as life allowed. My latest move to Massachusetts introduced me to the Academy of Realist Art in Boston and the Quincy Arts Association where I continue my art training. I work from my personal studio in Quincy.

"My drawing, painting and photography subjects include landscape, still life, portrait, and figure some of which are shown on my website (www.thornjoyarts.com). I find learning and developing skills in one medium or subject improves my abilities in the other mediums and subjects. Switching between projects helps me tackle more difficult or time-consuming pieces.

"The prize-winning artwork along with many others can be seen at the Arts Affair in the Square exhibit through Sept. 4th at the Quincy Art Association's QArts Gallery, 1229 Hancock St., Quincy. Please visit our website quincyartma.org for hours and more information."

*Over 1,300 Ballots Cast • 18 Playground Projects
• LaBrequé, Wollaston Tie For First Place*

The Quincy Recreation Department's Annual Arts and Crafts Display at City Hall Plaza attracted a large turnout once again this year.

Playground participants, recreation leaders, and members of the public came out to view the 18 projects and show their support. In total there were over 1,300 ballots cast for this year's competition.

After the two-day exhibit, the votes were tallied. LaBrequé's "Surf Shack" and Wollaston's "Stranger Things: Vecna" clinched a tie for first place. Both projects were the end result of a great amount of time and effort.

Following in second place was the "Snoopy Dog House" constructed by Kincaide playground. Faxon playground's display of the "Where The Wild Things Are Tipi" finished up in a close third place.

Recreation Director Michelle Hanly said that the children, recreation leaders, and the Arts and Crafts Specialists deserve extra recognition for the hard work involved in producing such great projects. Arts and Crafts Specialists Abby Hanly, Julianne Gazzola, and Gina Ash organized the exhibit and voting.

The Recreation leaders at the winning playgrounds were a huge help. The leaders from LaBrequé are Lily Hanly, Scott Gutro, Johnny Acosta-Garcia, Norah Cronin, and Ammar Chundara. Participants Gavin O'Hare, Declan O'Hare and Ryan O'Hare came up with the winning idea.

The leaders from Wollaston are Abigail Newton, Sean Burns and Max Melchin.

Participants Paige Toland, Chrissy Mergel, and Beckett Henderson were extremely helpful while creating the project.

The creation of the "Snoopy Dog House" was truly a team effort and was created by participants Hannah Day and Peyton Boretti working together under the direction of leaders Kaitlyn Zemotel, Amanda Depaula, Nick Pereira and Brian Rodrigues to create the second place winner.

Faxon playground finished with a respectable third place award. Their project "Where The Wild Things Are Tipi" was created by recreation leaders Elizabeth Esdale, Owen Callaghan, Meaghan Foley and Charlotte McConville.

The participants from all 15 playground locations worked hard in order to receive prizes generously donated by local business establishments.

"Many thanks to the kind generosity of Ginger Betty's, Nick's Pizza, Time Out Pizza and Grill, Romanza Pizzeria, Napoli's Pizzeria, and Confectionately Yours Cupcakes for donating prizes for our winners," Hanly said. "Their generosity helps ensure that the hard work of these youngsters does not go unrewarded. Their sponsorship helped to make this year's event tremendously successful."

three different initiatives within the cemetery.

"The main thing was they had these sculpture works around the cemetery, but they didn't have any signage explaining what they were. So I had some signs made and installed that explain the historical context behind the artwork," he said.

"The second part was we built and installed some owl boxes to attract some screech owls to the cemetery and put those up on six different trees around the cemetery.

"For the final piece, we cleaned a bunch of headstones and uploaded photographs of them to an online headstone database."

LeLacheur said a team of about 40 volunteers helped him complete the project at the cemetery.

"Everyone who worked on my project was a huge help," he said. "I couldn't have done it without them."

LeLacheur credited the troop's scoutmasters for their assistance with the project.

"They helped a lot with the organization, particularly with my health issues," he said.

The boxes for the screech owls were designed to be the right size for those birds, LeLacheur said, and hung between 15 and 30 feet in the air.

"The hole size is meant to be for screech owls. You have to put them in sort of wooded areas to make sure screech owls are the ones who live in them, because it's also the same size for the sparrow hawk," he said.

"You put some bedding in the bottom and you screw on a lid. Then the owls who are looking for places in trees for roughly this size will just sort of move in."

Screech owls have been using those boxes, he added.

To clean up the headstones, the volunteers used a spray provided to them by the staff at the cemetery. LeLacheur said they cleaned dozens of headstones that day and then took pictures of them that were posted to an online database.

"The cemetery gave us this spray to give us headstones to make sure algae wouldn't grow on them," he said. "After the scouts finished cleaning them, they LeLacheur graduated from Milton High School in 2021 and took a gap year following graduation. This fall, he will be attending Vassar College in New York.

"I'm thinking of taking some introductory courses on computer science and cognitive science. I haven't taken any classes in those areas before so, who knows, I might hate it," LeLacheur said.

After college, LeLacheur said he may pursue a career in one of those fields.

"If I do end up liking computer science and cognitive science, [I'll] probably go into a field related to that," he said.

Quincy Choral Society Rehearsals For December Concert Begin This Month

Monday, Sept. 12 At East Congregational Church, Quincy-Milton Line

This month, the Quincy Choral Society will begin rehearsals for its Christmas/holiday concert in December.

Under the direction of Sarah Labrie, this performance is the New England premiere of Tim Sharp's new Christmas cantata "Angel Band." A multi-movement piece with a truly American sound, the cantata includes songs and carols from the Appalachian shape-note tradition as well as Moravian and Celtic songs, all accompanied by bluegrass instrumentation. The program will also include smaller winter songs and traditional carols.

Rehearsals will begin at 7:30 p.m. on Monday, Sept. 12 at East Congregational Church on the Quincy-Milton line. Quincy Choral Society is happy to welcome new singers for all four voice parts, especially tenors and basses.

QCS is a non-auditioned chorus, but the ability to carry a tune and a willingness to practice at home between rehearsals are requirements. Accompanist Gingy Grimes will be on hand to provide support. For more information please contact QCS via our website.

Looking ahead, QCS will perform works from the "Great American Songbook" at its annual "pops" concert and silent auction, to be held in March 2023. The final concert of the season, to be held in May, will be a performance of the Mozart "Requiem," accompanied by a chamber orchestra.

Quincy Choral Society was founded in 1981 for the purpose of bringing musical excellence to the South Shore and the world. In December 2015, the Quincy City Council recognized Quincy Choral Society for bringing music and joy to the City of Quincy for 35 years. The chorus performs locally and has performed in music festivals in Washington, D.C., in Europe, at Carnegie Hall as part of the Masterworks Series, and most recently in Montreal and Quebec. In September 2018, the chorus participated in the dedication of the Hancock - Adams Common. Named Quincy Choral Society's sixth Artistic Director in 2020, Sarah Labrie holds a Bachelor of Music in music education from Westminster Choir College. She received both her Master of Music and Certificate of Advanced Graduate Study in Choral Conducting from Messiah University in July 2021.

A Boston-based conductor, Labrie is also the artistic director of Vellichor Vocal Ensemble, a professional chamber choir, and is one of the choral directors at Stoughton High School, where she works with four curricular and two extra-curricular choirs. In addition to conducting and teaching, she actively sings with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus and in various choral performances throughout the U.S. and Europe.

Virginia "Gingy" Grimes, a graduate of Duke University, has served as collaborative accompanist for Quincy Choral Society since 1993. She is also minister of music at First Parish, Norwell, music director for the Pierce Players of the Milton Public Schools, and music director for Derby Summer Arts in Hingham. She is pianist for North Quincy and Quincy High Schools, for Hanscom Middle School in Bedford, and for Temple Beth David, Canton, during High Holy Days.

Grimes also teaches and accompanies at Milton Academy. She has been musical director for several theater productions including Stephen Sondheim's A Little Night Music and Alan Mencken's Little Shop of Horrors.

USDA Recommends Adding Food Safety Items To Your Back-to-School List

On your next back-to-school shopping trip, make sure to include food safety items on your shopping list to keep school lunches safe.

"Every day, parents focus on the health and safety of their children, and this focus includes how they prepare and pack lunches," said Sandra Eskin, Deputy Under Secretary for Food Safety at the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA). "Because children are particularly at risk for serious food-borne illness, food safety must be at the top of the list when preparing lunches for school and field trips."

Consider the following for your shopping list:

- Clean and sanitize surfaces and utensils: Clean your prep area before you start that school lunch. A recent USDA study showed that cross-contamination was prevalent in the kitchen during food prep. Therefore, be sure to wash your cutting boards, dishes, utensils and countertops with soap and after preparing each food item and before proceeding to the next item. A homemade bleach-based solution of one tablespoon of unscented liquid chlorine bleach to one gallon of water can be used to sanitize surfaces and utensils in the kitchen.

- Different colored cutting boards: Separate meat and poultry from ready-to-eat foods (such as fruits, vegetables, cheeses, etc.) to avoid cross-contamination during your food preparation.

- Food thermometers for food prep: If you are cooking a frozen item for your child's lunch, use a food thermometer to check whether a meal has reached a safe temperature to kill any harmful bacteria. Beware: some frozen foods are not fully cooked or not ready-to-eat, but have browned breading, grill marks or other signs that suggest that they are cooked. Make sure they are cooked to a safe internal temperature: meat (whole beef, pork and lamb) 145 F with a 3-minute rest; ground meats 160 F; poultry (ground and whole) 165 F; eggs 160 F; fish and shellfish 145 F; and leftovers and casseroles 165 F.

- Insulated lunch boxes and gel packs: Perishable food can be unsafe to eat by lunch time if packed in a paper bag. Keep your meal cool by storing it in an insulated bag. Place a frozen gel pack, combined with a frozen juice box or bottle of water to keep food cold and to avoid the "Danger Zone" (temperatures between 40 F and 140 F where bacteria can multiply quickly and cause illness).

- Insulated containers: If hot liquids such as soup, chili or stew are on the menu, use an insulated container to keep items hot at 140 F and above. Fill the container with boiling water, let it stand for a few minutes, empty, and then pour in the hot food. Keep the insulated container closed until lunchtime.

- Handwashing aides: Hand wipes and 60 percent alcohol-based hand sanitizers are ideal for children to clean their hands before they eat when water and soap are not available.

AAA Advises Vacationers To Travel Smart This Labor Day Weekend

According to an informal regional survey of AAA members, 31% say they plan to travel for Labor Day weekend, but 49% will not. And 70% of those surveyed admit that inflation—including higher gas and air fare prices—played a role in their travel decisions. However, a significant number say they plan to travel in the remaining months of the year or in 2023, especially with air fare prices projected to decline this fall and winter.

Still, as Labor Day rapidly approaches, many travelers will take to the roads and skies to celebrate the unofficial end of summer. Given the spate of recent flight cancellations and delays related to weather and staffing issues, AAA advises travelers to always have a plan B—and offers advice on coping with flight cancellations, delays and luggage issues.

AAA encourages travelers, including those looking forward to a Labor Day getaway, to sign up for text and email alerts from the airlines—and to check for delays and cancellations before leaving for the airport.

"Downloading your carrier's app—as well as an app for an alternate carrier—is a step all travelers should take, and may provide you with the best tool for rebooking a flight as expeditiously as possible on your phone," says Mary Maguire, director of Public and Government Affairs. "Having that app handy, and using it quickly, could help you avoid a long delay."

There are also important steps flyers can take to minimize the impact of flight delays and misplaced luggage. "Catching the first flight in the morning—and packing a carry-on bag rather than checking a bag can help travelers avoid delays and lost luggage," says Cyndi Zesk, vice president of Travel at AAA Northeast. "And purchasing travel insurance to protect your investment is now more important than ever."

AAA highly recommends booking trips with a trusted travel advisor to protect your investment. A travel advisor can help rebook a flight after a cancellation and will help you find

LABOR DAY TRAVEL TIPS

- 1 Sign up for airline text and email alerts.
- 2 Check for delays and cancellations before heading to the airport.
- 3 Download the airline's app & an app for an alternate carrier for easy rebooking.
- 4 Choose the earliest flight option possible.
- 5 Pack a carry-on bag rather than checking luggage.

the right travel insurance for your trip.

AAA also urges travelers who fly domestically to get a REAL ID if they haven't already done so. And for anyone traveling abroad, check well in advance to make sure your passport isn't expired. If so, you may want to consider Rush My Passport, an expedited passport courier service. For more information on planning your trip, visit www.AAA.com/Travel.

If you're hitting the road Labor Day weekend, AAA encourages drivers to leave early if possible, and to access the AAA mobile App to gauge real-time traffic conditions before heading out. Gas prices are falling, but fill your tank before you hit the road, as gas is generally pricier at popular tourist destinations. Whether flying, driving, or taking public transit, enjoy your trip!

Where are AAA members headed this Labor Day? The top five destinations for the holiday are:

1. Orlando, Florida
 2. Italy
 3. Las Vegas, Nevada
 4. Canada and New England cruising
 5. Ireland
- The top 5 destinations AAA members are booking for the rest of the year are:

COMFORTABLE, COMPASSIONATE AND CREATIVE SERVICES

Dear World

My young son starts to school today. It's going to be sort of strange and new to him for awhile, and I wish you would sort of treat him gently. You see, up to now he's been king of the roost. He's been boss of the backyard. His mother has always been near to soothe his wounds and repair his feelings. But now things are going to be different. This morning he's going to walk down the front steps, wave his hand, and start out on the great adventure. It is an adventure that might take him across continents, across oceans. It's an adventure that will probably include wars and tragedy and sorrow. To live his life in the world he will have to live in, will require faith and love and courage.

So, World, I wish you would sort of look after him. Take him by the hand and teach him things he will have to know. But do it gently, if you can. He will have to learn, I know, that all men are not just, that all men are not true. But teach him also that for every scoundrel there is a hero. That for every crooked politician there is a great and dedicated leader. Teach him that for every enemy there is a friend. Steer him away from envy, if you can, and teach him the secret of quiet laughter. In school, World, teach him it is far more honorable to fail than to cheat. Teach him to have faith in his own ideas, even if everyone says they are wrong. Teach him to be gentle with gentle people and tough with tough people. Try to give my son the strength not to follow the crowd when everyone is getting on the bandwagon. Teach him to listen to all men - but teach him also to filter all he hears on a screen of truth and take just the good that siphons through. Teach him, if you can, how to laugh when he is sad. Teach him there is no shame in tears. Teach him there can be glory in failure and despair in success. Treat him gently, World, if you can, but don't coddle him, because only the test of fire makes fine steel. Let him have the courage to be impatient. Let him have the patience to be brave. Let him be no man's man. Teach him always to have sublime faith in himself, because then he will always have sublime faith in mankind.

This is quite an order, World, but see what you can do. He's such a nice little fellow, my son!

ensure ADA compliance, and prioritize pedestrian and cyclist safety."

"With the safety of our public transportation infrastructure on everyone's minds, the passage of this legislation could not come at a better time," said Sen. John Keenan (D-Quincy). "We are investing billions of dollars into modernizing the MBTA and ensuring rider safety. It is not a permanent solution, but it is an important and necessary step forward."

"The funding secured in this bond bill will provide much-needed support to our roads and bridges, as well as necessary updates to our public transit infrastructure," said Rep. Bruce Ayers (D-Quincy). "Thousands of Quincy residents depend on a reliable, resilient MBTA, and this funding will continue our commitment towards the improvements that benefit our neighborhoods and our constituents."

Other highlights of the bill include:

- More than $7.5 billion for multi-modal state transportation projects and programs, including federal Bipartisan Infrastructure Law projects

- $1.38 billion for MBTA modernization

- $400 million for the MBTA to address safety issues highlighted by the ongoing review by the Federal Transit Administration

- $275 million to support the establishment of an east-west passenger rail line

- $225 million to support electric vehicle and bike use, reduce emissions, and expand electric vehicle infrastructure

- $85 million for non-federally funded roads

- $64.9 million for regional transit authorities

- $55 million for municipal grants, including municipal pavement and Complete Streets

- $25 million for grants to transportation management associations to reduce vehicle congestion, improve air quality, and enhance transportation demand

To promote the adoption of electric vehicles (EVs), the bill also includes $175 million for the development and implementation of programs to promote, establish or expand public electric vehicle charging infrastructure, the development and implementation of incentive programs promoting e-bikes and public transportation, replacement of high-emissions vehicles, electric vehicles for hire and carsharing, electric school buses, electric short-haul freight and delivery trucks, and for other pilot projects that focus on equity and inclusion while reducing emissions.

The bill makes significant reforms to address the severe safety concerns around the MBTA. The bill mandates the MBTA to establish and maintain a three-year safety improvement plan with measurable safety objectives for the agency, and it directs the MBTA to contract with an independent third-party auditor to conduct annual safety audits. To ensure transparency around the MBTA's safety, the bill directs the MBTA to submit a monthly, publicly available report containing all the incidents, accidents, casualties, and hazards affecting any of its modes of transit. In addition, the MBTA is required to develop and implement short-term, medium-term, and long-term plans for how each line of the commuter rail system can be fully integrated into the Commonwealth's transportation system and contribute to the productivity, equity, and decarbonization efforts of the MBTA as a whole.

Other policy provisions related to the MBTA include to hold a mandatory, 30-day appeal process during which the authority must confer with the municipality's planning officials to explore alternatives when there is a bus route service elimination and to develop an updated service and operational plans for established and potential water transportation routes involving passenger ferry service.

Solid Defense, Complete Game By Keenan Combine For Quincy 2-1 Win

In recent Boston Amateur Baseball League (BABL)

Colford 52+ Division action at Adams Field, the Quincy greybeards closed in on a playoff berth.

On the mound, Quincy's Jim Keenan again delivered another gem, ringing up five Ks and getting out of a couple of bases loaded situations as the Knights threatened late into the game, which are 7-inning games.

Catcher Ed Cameron was a warrior behind the plate, and first baseman Glenn Kubalco dug out a couple of throws in the dirt to get shutdown a potential Knight rally. Offensively, TJ Pugliese led the team with three hits, driving in Larry "wheels" Tag, who stole second and third base to give Quincy an early 1-0 lead. After the Knights tied the game, Quincy Co-Captain Rich Sexton doubled and then scored to give Quincy a 2-1 edge in the bottom of the 5th inning. Quincy's defense was stellar as Keenan baffled the Knight's batters with a mix of fastballs and a dazzling curveball.

Playoffs begin Sept 7th. At 6-6, Quincy is vying for one of the final playoff seed and possible home field advantage in the 9-team division. For more information visit

Morrissey Endorses Liss-Riordan For AG

Norfolk County District Attorney Michael Morrissey announces he has endorsed Shannon Liss-Riordan for state attorney general.

In a press release, Morrissey said:

"Being the attorney general is a real job, one that requires an experienced attorney to do the job successfully. Shannon Liss-Riordan is the only person in the race who fits the bill and that is why I am proud to support her for Attorney General. She has spent the last 23 years fighting for workers and putting millions of dollars back into people's pockets.

"As your district attorney I need a partner in the AG's Office who understands the needs of our communities, and that person is Shannon Liss-Riordan."

Liss-Riordan said:

"I am so proud to have the support of District Attorney Morrissey, someone who has been committed to public service for decades. From tackling substance abuse through a treatment lens to prioritizing the care of victims of violent crimes, DA Morrissey has been a leader among our nation's District Attorneys and I will work hand-in-hand with him as our next Attorney General. The people of Norfolk County deserve an experienced and trusted lawyer as their next Attorney General. I have the experience and the record of winning for regular people that sets me apart from my opponents. I humbly ask for your vote on Sept. 6."

Morrissey was elected in 2010 as Norfolk district attorney. Prior to his election, he served as the state senator from the Norfolk and Plymouth District from 1992 to 2010. In addition, he served in the Massachusetts House of Representatives from 1977 to 1992.

"Shannon Liss-Riordan is uniquely qualified to serve as Massachusetts attorney general," Morrissey said. "She regularly collaborates with the current Attorney General's office, and she understands the complexities of running the people's law firm. She knows how to effectively lead teams of lawyers to deliver real results for the people. She's ready to take on the most difficult issues, from the deteriorating dignity of work to the childcare crisis to reproductive freedom to climate change, and win for Bay Staters."

Liss-Riordan is the co-founder of Lichten & Liss-Riordan, P.C. which is a nationally recognized law firm that is dedicated to vindicating the rights of workers across Massachusetts and the country through class action and individual litigation. She resides in Norfolk County with her husband and children.

READERS FORUM

Hopes Leaders Can Resolve Bridge Issue, Provide Facility For People Who Need Help

In your Aug. 18th edition you had an excellent article (letter to the editor) from a West Quincy resident, Mr. Jim Ryan, and again on the related topic in the Aug. 25th edition by Joan Smith and in Aug. 11th edition by Mr. Bill Zamzow of Quincy.

Mr. Ryan writes about the broken sidewalks on Copeland Street, heavily travelled roadways and cut through traffic, loss of our historic city character, and the Long Island Bridge dilemma and Mayor's potential lawsuit hindering the progress of the Long Island Bridge re-construction. Many of the residents we speak with agree with these writers.

Copeland Street area, for example, has become somewhat marginalized and doesn't receive the care other, more affluent parts of the city receives.

Yes, there is the Granite Workers Memorial park, which the City maintains very well, but that is also a traffic island and no shade tree to reduce pollution and heat. Recently it lost two large Spruce trees.

On the bright side however; we now have the newly restored Kincaide Park, which the City was clever to find resources for its funding. It now serves all Quincy residents and soccer teams throughout the area. It also has a splash pad for the children to cool off. One very special feature are the several rain gardens, or as the Landscape Architect, Scott Bishop uses the term infiltration systems, (cleans the rain water from the impermeable areas before entering the storm water drain) but then again, Water Street is also heavily travelled street. And there is no room for trees there either, as the houses were built to the edge of sidewalks. It is not the green and leafy area. Hoping that all the new trees Quincy is investing will show the results in the years to come, if we leave a little room for the trees, and not replace them non attractive high-rises.

The city councillors have very little impact when it comes to development in the neighborhoods, as long as the Zoning Board of Appeals will grant variances, some may very well warrant.

Perhaps, with the Community Planning and Development Department and the annual federal funding they receive for the low income neighborhoods needing most improvements can step up to the plate.

Possibly the above mentioned department can come to play a role for areas in dire need of help, such as Copeland Street. That street for example, it has historically been a challenge and therefore perhaps been neglected even though it is the gateway to the City center from the Southeast Expressway. As it looks right now, it doesn't reflect the historic City of Quincy.

Back to Mr. Ryan's and Mr. Zamzow's letters regarding the Long Island Bridge argument: many of us here in this neighborhood agree with the writers and are strongly suggesting that the City would tactfully withdraw their lawsuits against City of Boston and spare us taxpayers the additional cost already accrued.

There must be innovative ideas which could resolve this dilemma and satisfy the residents and the citizens of Squantum and those residents who urgently need professional help for recovery.

Historically, the Long Island had TB and Mental Health hospital. It also had under Mayor Menino's time several-acre farm; growing produce for the Long Island central kitchen. That kitchen prepared meals for all of Boston shelters, not only for the Long Island residents. It was an Institute of Learning under Mayor Menino's tenure. There, there were experts who taught the residents to become chefs, information technology specialists, and farmers and marketers.

Wouldn't it be great if that farm could once more be brought to a working farm!

When Massachusetts imports some 80 percent of its fruits and vegetables, therefore any farm that is close to the population density, is only a winning situation benefiting all of us. Today, there is a huge demand for locally grown produce - testimony of that is the increasing numbers of farmers' markets.

We hope that our leaders find an innovative way to resolve the issue so that it would have minimal impact for the Squantum residents and provide a facility for people who are in need of help.

Asks Councillor Anne Mahoney How City Should Address Housing Issues

Dear Councillor and Mr. Mahoney:

I've heard you are looking for residents feedback on the recent ZBA meeting for your podcast.

While I don't want to comment on the Imperial Terrace project itself, I'm interested in hearing how you think Quincy can address its housing and affordability issues.

As a resident in my late 20s, I fear I am going to be squeezed out of the city. I can't afford a down payment on a home and rents are astronomically high.

I know a residential exemption for property taxes has been discussed, but this would be disastrous for people in my situation as landlords would just pass the cost onto their tenants.

In theory, new development would help, not hurt, renters and homeowners alike by helping to meet demand but I don't think anyone harbors any delusions about new units here being remotely affordable for the average resident.

At the same time, however, I don't think it's fair to "just say no" to any project because it may lead to more traffic. Quincy is not developing in a vacuum and new developments in Hingham and Weymouth and the like do impact us.

Parking may also be a concern but it also seems to be unfair that long term residents can park as many vehicles as they like on city streets but "newcomers" cannot. Multiple residents at Tuesday's meeting said they and their guests are already crowding Quincy's streets. Should they not be asked to address this? This is Merrymount after all, a neighborhood that has not had the same development that places like Wollaston, North Quincy, West Quincy, Quincy Center and other areas have seen over the last decade.

Sorry if I rambled a bit here. I look forward to hearing your response on your next podcast.

Keep up the good work.

them from Boston to Quincy in the terrible traffic between 6 a.m. and 8 p.m. and even later into the evening, as the traffic is unpredictable at all hours of the night. It makes ZERO sense to put the burden on taxpayers to the tune of hundreds of millions to build a bridge, tear down the dilapidated buildings and rebuild. There are existing buildings in Boston that can be used.

Boston had the chance to convert the old Shadduck, but, of course, NIMBY. It makes ZERO sense to have people suffering medical emergencies waiting for EMS transport to travel through traffic or now from Boston to Quincy to Long Island and then back to Quincy and through traffic to a Boston hospital. Quincy does not have a hospital.

Boston's problems should not become the burden of Quincy residents. Now that the growing opioid crisis has resulted in what you call "unsavories" all over Boston - wreaking havoc on commuters, residents and businesses, raising crime rates and affecting every aspect of life and work in Boston - people like you think the most logical response would be to spend hundreds of millions to build a bridge, tear down the decrepit existing buildings and build new buildings? No, it's not logical.

Boston wants to clean up their streets to answer to its residents and businesses who complain and want to move out of the city. Boston's mayor, city council and legislators want to be re-elected and know that their constituents are angry when they find people sleeping on their stoop, needles in their yards and in the parks and human feces on their property. You think they care about the people you call unsavories? I can assure you, it's NIMBY and it's politics.

And people like you are mad because you don't like your neighborhood and want a quiet neighborhood to suffer for it. Tell me how any part of your letter makes sense? While in my opinion it is not fiscally or environmentally responsible, practical, feasible or logical to rebuild the buildings on the island, if it does happen, please explain why if Boston wants a bridge, they can't build it from Boston to Long Island? Or why Boston would not want to save their taxpayers money and simply provide a ferry service? And why would Quincy fight this? Why would anyone want to have more traffic and safety risks in their neighborhoods?

The way you described the beautiful community of West Quincy is appalling. Your complaints about the expressway running through West Quincy are puzzling - were you unaware it was there when you moved into your home? What you implied about Squantum and its residents is the most absurd, insulting, outrageous garbage I have ever read. I am sure when you are in Squantum at the park with your daughter that you feel welcome and are treated with kindness - makes your comments about our neighborhood and people even more rude and offensive.

Support Diana DiZoglio For State Auditor

As your local legislators, we are proud to support Diana DiZoglio for State Auditor.

Diana is a smart, fearless, and determined woman who will hold state government accountable. Having worked with Diana in the House of Representatives and the State Senate, we have seen firsthand the work she has done for all the residents of Massachusetts. She has stood up for working families like ours. She has been our legislative partner, supporting efforts to bring needed resources to our local communities.

Diana was born to a 17-year-old single mom, grew up housing insecure and saw first-hand the disproportionate impacts of unfair policies on underserved communities. As a young woman, she waitressed and cleaned houses to pay her way through community college and earned scholarships to Wellesley College, becoming the first in her family to graduate. She gets the struggle of working families and knows what it's like to have to be scrappy. She will look out to make sure our hard-earned tax dollars are not wasted.

As a legislator and current state Senator, Diana has repeatedly demonstrated her willingness to fight for accountability and equity for the people of our community.

Diana is running for Auditor to ensure that everyone, no matter their background, bank balance, or zip code, is treated the same by our government. Diana will be the People's Auditor.

We are thrilled to endorse Diana DiZoglio for State Auditor.

Housing Crisis Solution: Build More Housing

We are in a housing crisis in Massachusetts.

The state needs to build over 108,000 new units and counting to meet the rising demand for housing (Massachusetts has 'crippling' housing deficit, The Boston Herald, July 14). Our housing costs are third highest in the nation (It costs a fortune to live in Greater Boston, WBUR, June 23).

The solution here is obvious: Build more housing. But the politicians and residents of Quincy would rather turn a blind eye and pretend nothing is wrong.

This is no more evident than watching Tuesday's (Aug. 23rd) Zoning Board meeting, when residents and cops alike came out to bash a proposed modest 18-unit building. Of course, one couldn't notice how the opposition was mainly older and exclusively white (this in a city where roughly a third of the population is of AAPI descent).

It's easy for those residents to say no to new developments - I got mine already, let's keep the newcomers out. Ditto for the three at-large councilors, none of whom have to worry about being priced out of the city because of rising rents or a lack of a home to buy. (Shoutout for Ward 1 Councillor David McCarthy for being the voice of reason and taking an unpopular stand, even if his OCPF records are a who's who of Quincy's developers.)

But what about their children? These same residents who spoke against this - and those who oppose similar projects - should not be shocked when their children try to leave the nest but are unable to do so given the high cost of living. What about the working class residents, our teachers, waiters and waitresses, retail workers, and others who can barely afford to call Quincy home.

Building more housing is the solution. Sure, none of the above groups could likely afford to live in the Timmins' proposed 18-unit building - let's not kid ourselves, barely any new housing here is affordable. But greater supply helps bring down costs overall - this is like the first rule of economics.

So, let's build, baby, build.

Supports Quentin Palfrey For AG

I write to my fellow voters ahead of the Democratic primary on September 6. In Massachusetts, these primaries are the key races, making widespread voter turnout essential for the best person for the position. At a time when our American values and democracy are under threat, we need strong state leadership in Massachusetts who will stand up for rights, our values, and for policies that will have a real impact on the issues that affect us every day.

I encourage you to join me in voting for Quentin Palfrey for Attorney General.

Quentin is far and away the most qualified and experienced candidate for AG on the ballot. He knows what is at stake in our democracy, thanks to his work as an election lawyer who founded the Voter Protection Corps to stop voter suppression. He is the only candidate to have worked in the very same office he will lead, serving as an Assistant AG and the first chief of the office's Healthcare division of the Attorney General's Office. He has demonstrated his expertise in public policy as a senior advisor in both the Obama White House and the Biden Administration. Quentin clearly has a unique level of experience that is unmatched by the other candidates in this race.

This experience leads to his ambitious policy agenda, which builds on the great work of outgoing AG

Maura Healey. Over the last few years we have seen how important to have a strong AG leading the charge across the country. He has released a comprehensive plan to defend reproductive rights. He'll hold gun manufacturers accountable, tackle educational inequality as an urgent civil rights issue, and ensure climate action and environmental justice are prioritized across the AG's office. He is well positioned to step into this impactful public office and deliver progress on the most pressing challenges facing Massachusetts.

I hope you'll join me in casting your vote for Quentin on Sept. 6th.

HOLLYWOOD

by Tony Rizzo

HOLLYWOOD — Tom Cruise does Fred Astaire? With "Mission: Impossible 8" in the can and the $1.8 billion grosses for "Top Gun: Maverick," at 60 years old, Cruise is taking on singing and dancing next in an as-yet-untitled musical. Cruise sang in "Rock of Ages," with Julianne Hough and Russell Brand (but it didn't even gross its $75 million cost). Fear not — he'll most likely get serious again later on with a top-secret action film that'll evolve into his next franchise. His third film will shoot in outer space, with NASA and Elon Musk's SpaceX. The plan is to dock with Axiom, the world's first commercial space station.

Jason Momoa's riding high with the $1.148 billion grosses from "Aquaman," and even though he has Netflix's "Slumberland," "Fast X" (scheduled to release May 2023), "Aquaman and the Lost Kingdom" (due June 2023), "Fast & Furious 11" and "The Last Manhunt" coming soon, he can't quite get over his turn as "Conan the Barbarian" in 2011, which cost $90 million and tanked with only a $63.5 million gross. Momoa admitted, "It was one of the best experiences I had, and it was taken over and turned into a pile of..." — let's just say, he wasn't exactly happy with the end result. Funny how he was thrilled to be Conan, until Aquaman got him into the swim of things!

Do major players like John Goodman, Sharon Stone, Sofia Vergara and Jane Seymour not fully understand that the downloadable, "free" phone app games they represent are traps for kids and people who love games?

These so-called "free" games can get people addicted to gambling. The games are developed by the Israel-based company Playtika, who advertises that Slotomania is free, but in order to keep spinning or playing after the initial free coins, you must spend real money to continue playing. Not only are these games not actually free, but the money you spend buying coins for spins doesn't keep you in the game for very long.

The only winner in this scam is Playtika: You can put your money into the game, but you can't take money out, because all winnings are "virtual." A 2018 Washington state class-action lawsuit accused Playtika of violating anti-gambling laws in their state. Did the stars hawking these games know what they're representing, or are they blinded by the big money they're making from it?

KOVELS Antiques & Collecting

By Terry and Kim Kovel

Toleware — Toleware was popular in New England and nearby areas in the 1700s. Collectors today identify the existing pieces by similarities in the shapes and painted decorations on newly discovered pieces.

Two paint colors were used as the base coat to protect the tin from rust; black or red was used in Pennsylvania, but only black was favored in parts of New England.

Pennsylvania makers usually made a straight spout and a handle with an extra piece to reinforce the curve in the handle. New England makers favored a simple curved handle. The body was a lighthouse shape, and tinsmiths made a gooseneck spout. Yellow, green, red and white flowers and leaves were stenciled on as decorations. The tinware lost favor when copper and silver plate became more available because tin often rusted. But some of the small utensils, such as cookie cutters and funnels, remained in use.

Q: I have many fond memories of a toy clock I played with in the 1960s and was surprised recently to find that old toy in a bin from my parent's garage. It was made by Fisher-Price Toys and is called the Tick Tock Clock. How much is it worth?

A: The bright red Fisher-Price Wind-Up Teaching Clock you are talking about was made from 1964 to 1968. It was made to look like the front of a schoolhouse, complete with a teacher welcoming children in the front door and a school bell at the top of the toy, near the bright yellow handle. When you wound it up, it played the Grandfathers Clock Song. The clock face had big numbers, images of the sun and moon, and the clock hands moved around as the song played. It taught motor skills and how to tell time. In good condition, the clock sells for around $60.

• "We attached an over-the-door plastic shoe organizer to the back of our pantry door. The slots that are reachable by the kids hold healthy, single-serving snacks for the morning, to include in lunches or for after-school snacking. It's easy and the kids have choices!" — M.M. in West Virginia

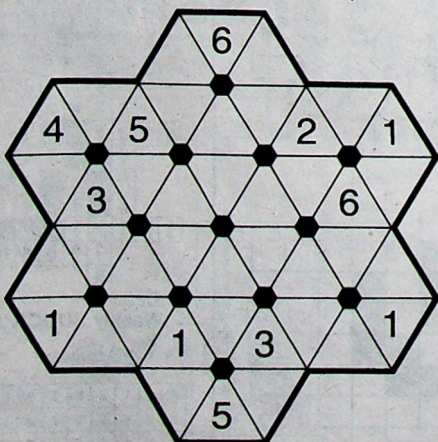

• Trying to lose weight? Many of us eat portions that are waaaaay too much. Try using a smaller size plate, or one with a border around it. Studies show that people who do so serve themselves less food and still feel satisfied.

Q: I read that there's a new comedy series called "Sprung" hailing from the same creator as "Raising Hope." I was a big fan of that show, but I can't find "Sprung" anywhere. Is it coming out this fall? — L.T.

A: The new wacky comedy from Greg Garcia ("My Name Is Earl" and "Raising Hope") can be streamed on the Freevee app (formerly known as the IMDb app). Visit Amazon.com/adlp/freevee-about if you have trouble finding it. "Sprung" takes place at the beginning of the pandemic, when some prisons released offenders of non-violent crimes early to help stop the spread of the coronavirus. "Raising Hope" stars Garrett Dillahunt and Martha Plimpton are a part of the cast, alongside Phillip Garcia ("Criminal Minds") and Shakira Barrera ("GLOW"). The foursome resort to a life of crime once again, only this time their targets aren't the innocent; instead, they only go after the duplicitous, including a price gouger of essential items like toilet paper and a medical professional who falsifies COVID results for monetary gain.

Q: Whatever happened to the actor who played Charlie on "Lost"? I know he was in the "Lord of the Rings" movies. Is he going to be in the new "LOTR" TV series on Amazon? — W.J.

A: Dominic Monaghan's talent and luck have led him to have a career any actor would envy. He's been part of two pop culture phenomena in the early 2000s: the TV series "Lost" and the "Lord of the Rings" blockbuster movies (as well as its sequels).

The new series "The Lord of the Rings: Rings of Power" is available to watch on Prime Video, but don't expect the same cast as the movie. Monaghan has moved on, and he can currently be seen playing Detective Paul Sarno in the AMC+ series "Moonhaven." You can also hear him playing Sherlock Holmes in the Audible podcast "Moriarty: The Devil's Game." As for the new "Rings of Power" series, expect to see the effects of an enormous film budget on the small screen. According to IndieWire.com, the first season alone, which will consist of eight episodes, is reported to have cost $450 million, and "by comparison, a season of 'Game of Thrones' was estimated to cost $90 million."

Q: Is the original "Law & Order" series returning this fall, or was the reboot intended to air just one season? I really enjoyed the cast, so I hope it returns. — P.U.

A: Yes, "Law & Order" will be back this fall for what is, technically, season 22. The only star not returning is Anthony Anderson, who played Detective Kevin Bernard. The actor had only signed on for one season, and reportedly, his absence will be explained in next season's premiere. Moving into his spot is Meachad Brooks as incoming Detective Jalen Shaw. His character has teamed up off-screen with Jeffrey Donovan's Detective Frank Cosgrove, so the partners should share a good rapport and focus on what's important in this procedural format — solving the case. "Law & Order" returns to NBC on Sept. 22 at 8 p.m. ET.

Blue-green Algae Is a Potentially Deadly Risk for Pets

DEAR PAW'S corner: A couple of weeks ago, my family took a trip to a nearby pond. Our dog Jessup splashed and played along with us. On the drive home, Jessup began to look ill and started drooling. When we reached home he got very ill and started having seizures. I rushed him to the emergency vet, where they treated him. The vet said that he may have ingested blue-green algae, and that it is very common in ponds and still water at this time of year. Please let your readers know about this risk! Jessup is recovering and will probably be OK, but the vet said this can be fatal.

Dear Sherry: I'm so glad to hear that Jessup is doing well! Yes, blue-green algae, also known as cyanobacteria, is toxic and can make a dog very ill if it's ingested. It exists in many bodies of freshwater and grows rapidly when the water temperature is over 75 degrees – so it's at its highest levels, and most dangerous, in the hot summer months. Look carefully at the water in the lake or pond before letting your dog near it. If you see a lot of pea-green growth and a slimy look to the water at the shoreline, don't let your dog jump in. Even if the water looks OK, check to see if any "no swimming" signs are posted nearby. You also can check your local county or city website or parks department for a water quality report. And even if the water is OK for people and dogs to swim in, be sure to rinse your dog's coat in clean tap water as soon as possible after swimming.

OBITUARY

David W. Leitch, 86

David Watson Leitch, age 86, of Phillips, ME and Ocala, FL, passed away peacefully on August 12, 2022 with his loving family by his side.

Dave was born in Lawrence, MA and raised in Weymouth, MA where he met his high school sweetheart and devoted wife of 66 years, June Priscilla Badger. Vets' Home Governance Legislation Signed Into Law

The Massachusetts Legislature passed an Act relative to the governance, structure and care of veterans' homes which makes key reforms to the governance structure of the state's veterans' homes, ensures that both homes are federally licensed as health care facilities, mandates increased state management, and provides independent oversight and accountability of veterans' homes management.

Following the tragedy at the Holyoke Veterans' Home in 2020, which resulted in the COVID-19 related deaths of 78 veterans, the Legislature established the Special Joint Oversight Committee on the veterans' Home in Holyoke COVID-19 Outbreak to investigate and make recommendations which resulted in this legislation.

"By taking significant steps to change how our veterans' homes are governed and managed, and by establishing protocols that are designed to identify and correct any examples of mismanagement or inadequate care as quickly as possible, this legislation will help to ensure that a tragedy similar to what occurred at the Holyoke Soldiers' Home will never happen again in Massachusetts," said House Speaker Ronald Mariano (D-Quincy). "I want to thank Leader Wagner, Chairman McMurtry and members of the conference committee, my colleagues in the House, as well as Senate President Spilka and our partners in the Senate for their hard work, and for prioritizing the health and well-being of the Commonwealth's veterans. They deserve nothing less."

"Given the tragedy that happened in Holyoke, the Legislature took decisive action to ensure accountability, improve oversight, and implement safeguards to prevent this from happening again," said Rep. Tackey Chan (D-Quincy). "The care of our veterans, after all of the sacrifices they have made, should be the Commonwealth's top priority."

"Our veterans have done so much to protect our freedoms, and yet many have not received the care that they need and deserve," said Sen. John F. Kennan (D-Quincy). "With the passage of this legislation, we will ensure these individuals get the necessary health-care supports under professional oversight and avoid the kinds of tragic missteps our Commonwealth has recently endured."

"Our veterans served our country and made sacrifices for our freedom. They shouldn't have to live in poor conditions that put their health and their wellbeing at risk," said Rep. Bruce Ayers

(D-Quincy). "I'm proud to have supported this legislation that ensures a safer living environment for the men and women who have served our country. It will help avoid tragedies like what we saw in Holyoke during the height of the COVID pandemic and give our veterans the housing they deserve."

The legislation creates a direct line of authority by creating a Secretary of Veterans' Services position, with a corresponding executive office in the Commonwealth, as the ultimate appointing authority of the superintendents of the two state-operated homes. It also creates a newly constituted Veterans' Homes Council to advise the Secretary to ensure the health and well-being of veteran residents. The council is tasked with reviewing and approving the local Board of Trustees' nomination for superintendent of their respective home before submitting the final candidate to the Secretary for consideration of appointment.

The legislation also makes the superintendent the administrative head of a state-operated veterans' home, prescribing them with concrete responsibilities. It includes critical qualifications for the role, requiring that the individual selected be a licensed nursing home administrator, and be a veteran or have experience in the management of veterans in a long-term care or nursing home facility. The medical director of each state-operated veterans' home will recommend to the superintendent all medical staff, physicians, and nurses at the respective home for their review for hiring.

To further protect the health and safety of residents and staff, the report requires all state-operated veterans' homes be licensed as nursing homes by the Department of Public Health (DPH), a provision that was not previously enforced in state law. It also directs the department to conduct inspections of the homes biannually—and monthly during a declared state of emergency—with a timeframe for when violations must be resolved. Each state-operated veterans' home must apply and maintain certification from the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS) to participate in such programs on behalf of their residents, as well as adhere to federal guidelines for trauma-informed care.

The comprehensive bill also reaffirms the role of the Executive Director of Veterans' Homes and Housing, who will now oversee the Veterans' Home Council as chair, in addition to their other responsibilities. The report goes further in enhancing the care of all veterans in the Commonwealth by creating an Office of the Veteran Advocate, appointed by the Governor, Attorney General and State Auditor, independent of any supervision control by an executive agency, to guarantee veterans residing in the state are always receiving services in a humane and dignified manner. The legislation also establishes the position of ombudsman for each veterans' home to advocate on behalf of the residents and staff at the home.

In May 2021, the Legislature approved a $600 million bond authorization—with $400 million for the construction of an updated Holyoke Veterans' Home facility and $200 million to increase geographic equity and accessibility for veterans not primarily served by the veterans' homes in Chelsea or Holyoke.

After passage by the House and the Senate, this legislation was signed by Governor Baker on Aug. 4th.

Creative Ways To Enjoy Pansies This Fall

By MELINDA MYERS

Pansies have long been a fall and winter garden favorite. These cheery flowers are sure to brighten landscapes and containers and add a smile to any occasion. Look for fun and new ways to add them to your garden and fall celebrations.

You will find these cool weather favorites at your local garden center. Pansies thrive in the cooler temperatures of fall and during mild winters when your summer annuals fade or succumb to frost. They make great fillers in garden beds and containers or displayed in their own planter.

Cool Wave®, Wonder-Fall and other trailing pansies are perfect for hanging baskets, as trailers in container gardens, or as edging plants in garden beds. You will need half as many of these pansy varieties to cover the same garden space.

Plant a basket of white trailing pansies, add some sunglasses and you have a ghost for Halloween. Scoop out the inside of a pumpkin, add some drainage holes and use it for a planter. Fill it with potting mix and you'll have a biodegradable pot for the compost pile when finished. Or simply set a container of pansies inside your pumpkin pot.

Be sure to include a few favorite colors, fragrant varieties, and some All-America Selections winners. Ultima Morpho was the 2002 winner that was selected for its distinct blue and yellow flower design. Padparadja is a true orange pansy that is perfect for fall and Majestic Giants pansy, selected in 1966, can still be found for sale. Generations of gardeners have planted this large-flowered, traditional-faced pansy.

Include pansies in your fall meals and gatherings. Only use pansies and other edible flowers that have not been treated with pesticides. Be sure to let your guests know that the pansies are safe to eat, so they can enjoy this unique dining experience. Otherwise, you will find blossoms at the bottom of glasses or left on plates.

Pick a few flowers, remove the reproductive parts, and freeze them in ice cube trays to serve in your favorite beverage. Float a few of the flower ice cubes in your favorite punch.

Add a gourmet touch, some unique flavor, and color to your salads by topping a bed of greens with a few flowers. Continue the theme by decorating cookies or cakes with a few of your favorite pansies. The cheerful flowers will generate happy thoughts and for some, a way to enjoy the last of this season's garden.

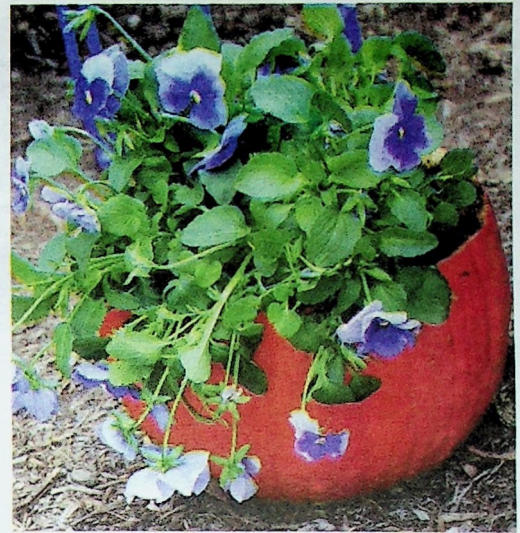

Brighten the start of school and your classroom while showing your favorite teacher a bit of appreciation. A do-it-yourself planter filled with cheery pansies is sure to elevate the mood of both students and teachers alike.

All you need are two yardsticks, a 4" x 4" wooden planter box, and a potted pansy and saucer that fit inside the planter box. Gather your glue gun and glue sticks, sandpaper, and a hobby knife to create your gift.

Cut the yardsticks into four-inch pieces and sand the cut edges smooth. Glue the yardstick pieces vertically and next to each other onto all four sides of the planter. Set the saucer in the bottom of the planter box and place the potted pansy on top of it.

Purchase plenty of pansies. You are sure to find other creative ways to utilize them this fall or simply use them as colorful fillers for voids in gardens and SCOOP OUT THE inside of a pumpkin, add some drainage holes, and plant some pansies for a festive fall planter.

WHAT IS WATER MAIN FLUSHING?

Water main flushing is a process in which water is systematically removed from the water system by sequentially opening fire hydrants and running them until the water is clear. During a water main flushing program, the scouring action created by inducing high flows helps to clean out the inner walls of the pipes and remove any build-up of naturally occurring debris and sediments.

- Water main flushing is crucial to the overall maintenance of a distribution system and is an important practice to maintain high water quality, improve the carrying capacity of pipes, and ensure proper operation of distribution system components, such as hydrants and valves.
- Flushing the water mains also ensures that fire hydrants are operational and allows DPW staff to assess the available flow rate for firefighting purposes.
- A main flushing program is typically carried out by flushing fire hydrants in a sequential order and until the water runs clear.

CAN I USE MY WATER WHEN IT IS DISCOLORED?

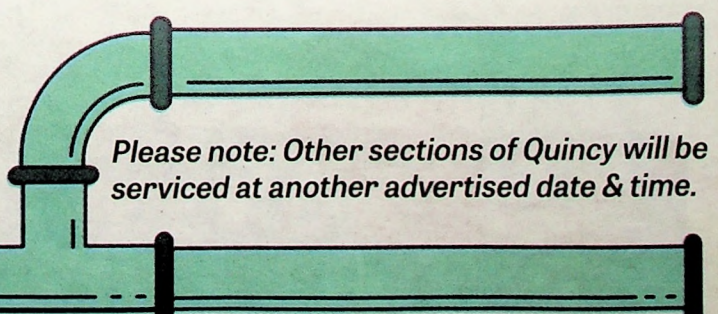

We advise customers not to use discolored water until it is clear. Discolored water is not palatable, and its quality has changed since it left the MWRA treatment facility. Therefore it should not be used for drinking or cooking. It could also stain laundry, discolor hot water systems, and interfere with commercial and industrial operations that rely on high quality water for their processes. Once the water has cleared, customers can resume normal use of the water.

WHAT YOU MIGHT EXPERIENCE

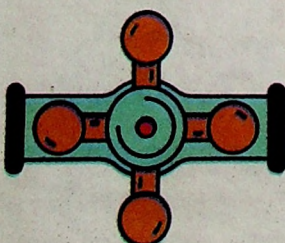

While the flushing program is ongoing, customers may notice episodes of decreased water pressure or discoloration of their water. Water discoloration results from temporary disturbances of the normal water flow within our piping network. These short-term changes in flow can stir up naturally occurring minerals and sediment that settle within the water mains. The objective of the water main/hydrant flushing program is to remove these accumulated sediments from our pipes by flushing the water out of the fire hydrants.
